Carmel Valley: a 'golden ghetto'?

Valley families struggle for survival

Special report:

By JOE LIVERNOIS
(Last in a series)

LATE LAST YEAR, several members of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District thought it would be appropriate that the engineer hired to coordinate the Carmel River Management Program live in Carmel Valley.

If he lived in the Valley, they reasoned, he would be closer to the activity for which he was responsible. And he could be close in case of an emergency.

Four months later, Gary Page, who moved from New York to take the job, lives in North Monterey County.

'I think it's terrible, especially down at the mouth of the Valley. The worst part is...where all the housing and shops and law offices are. They don't conform with each other and they certainly don't conform with the rest of the Valley.'

Page lives in North County because the water district board of directors, after considerable discussion, agreed that it could not ask an employee to live in Carmel Valley on the wages offered.

Page has a wife and two children — and another on the way. His wife attends school in Salinas, so North County is a good halfway point between their two activities.

He commutes to the water district offices in Monterey, but spends a substantial amount of time in Carmel Valley.

Like many professionals who work in Carmel and Carmel Valley but who commute from rural North County, Page would like to live in Carmel Valley.

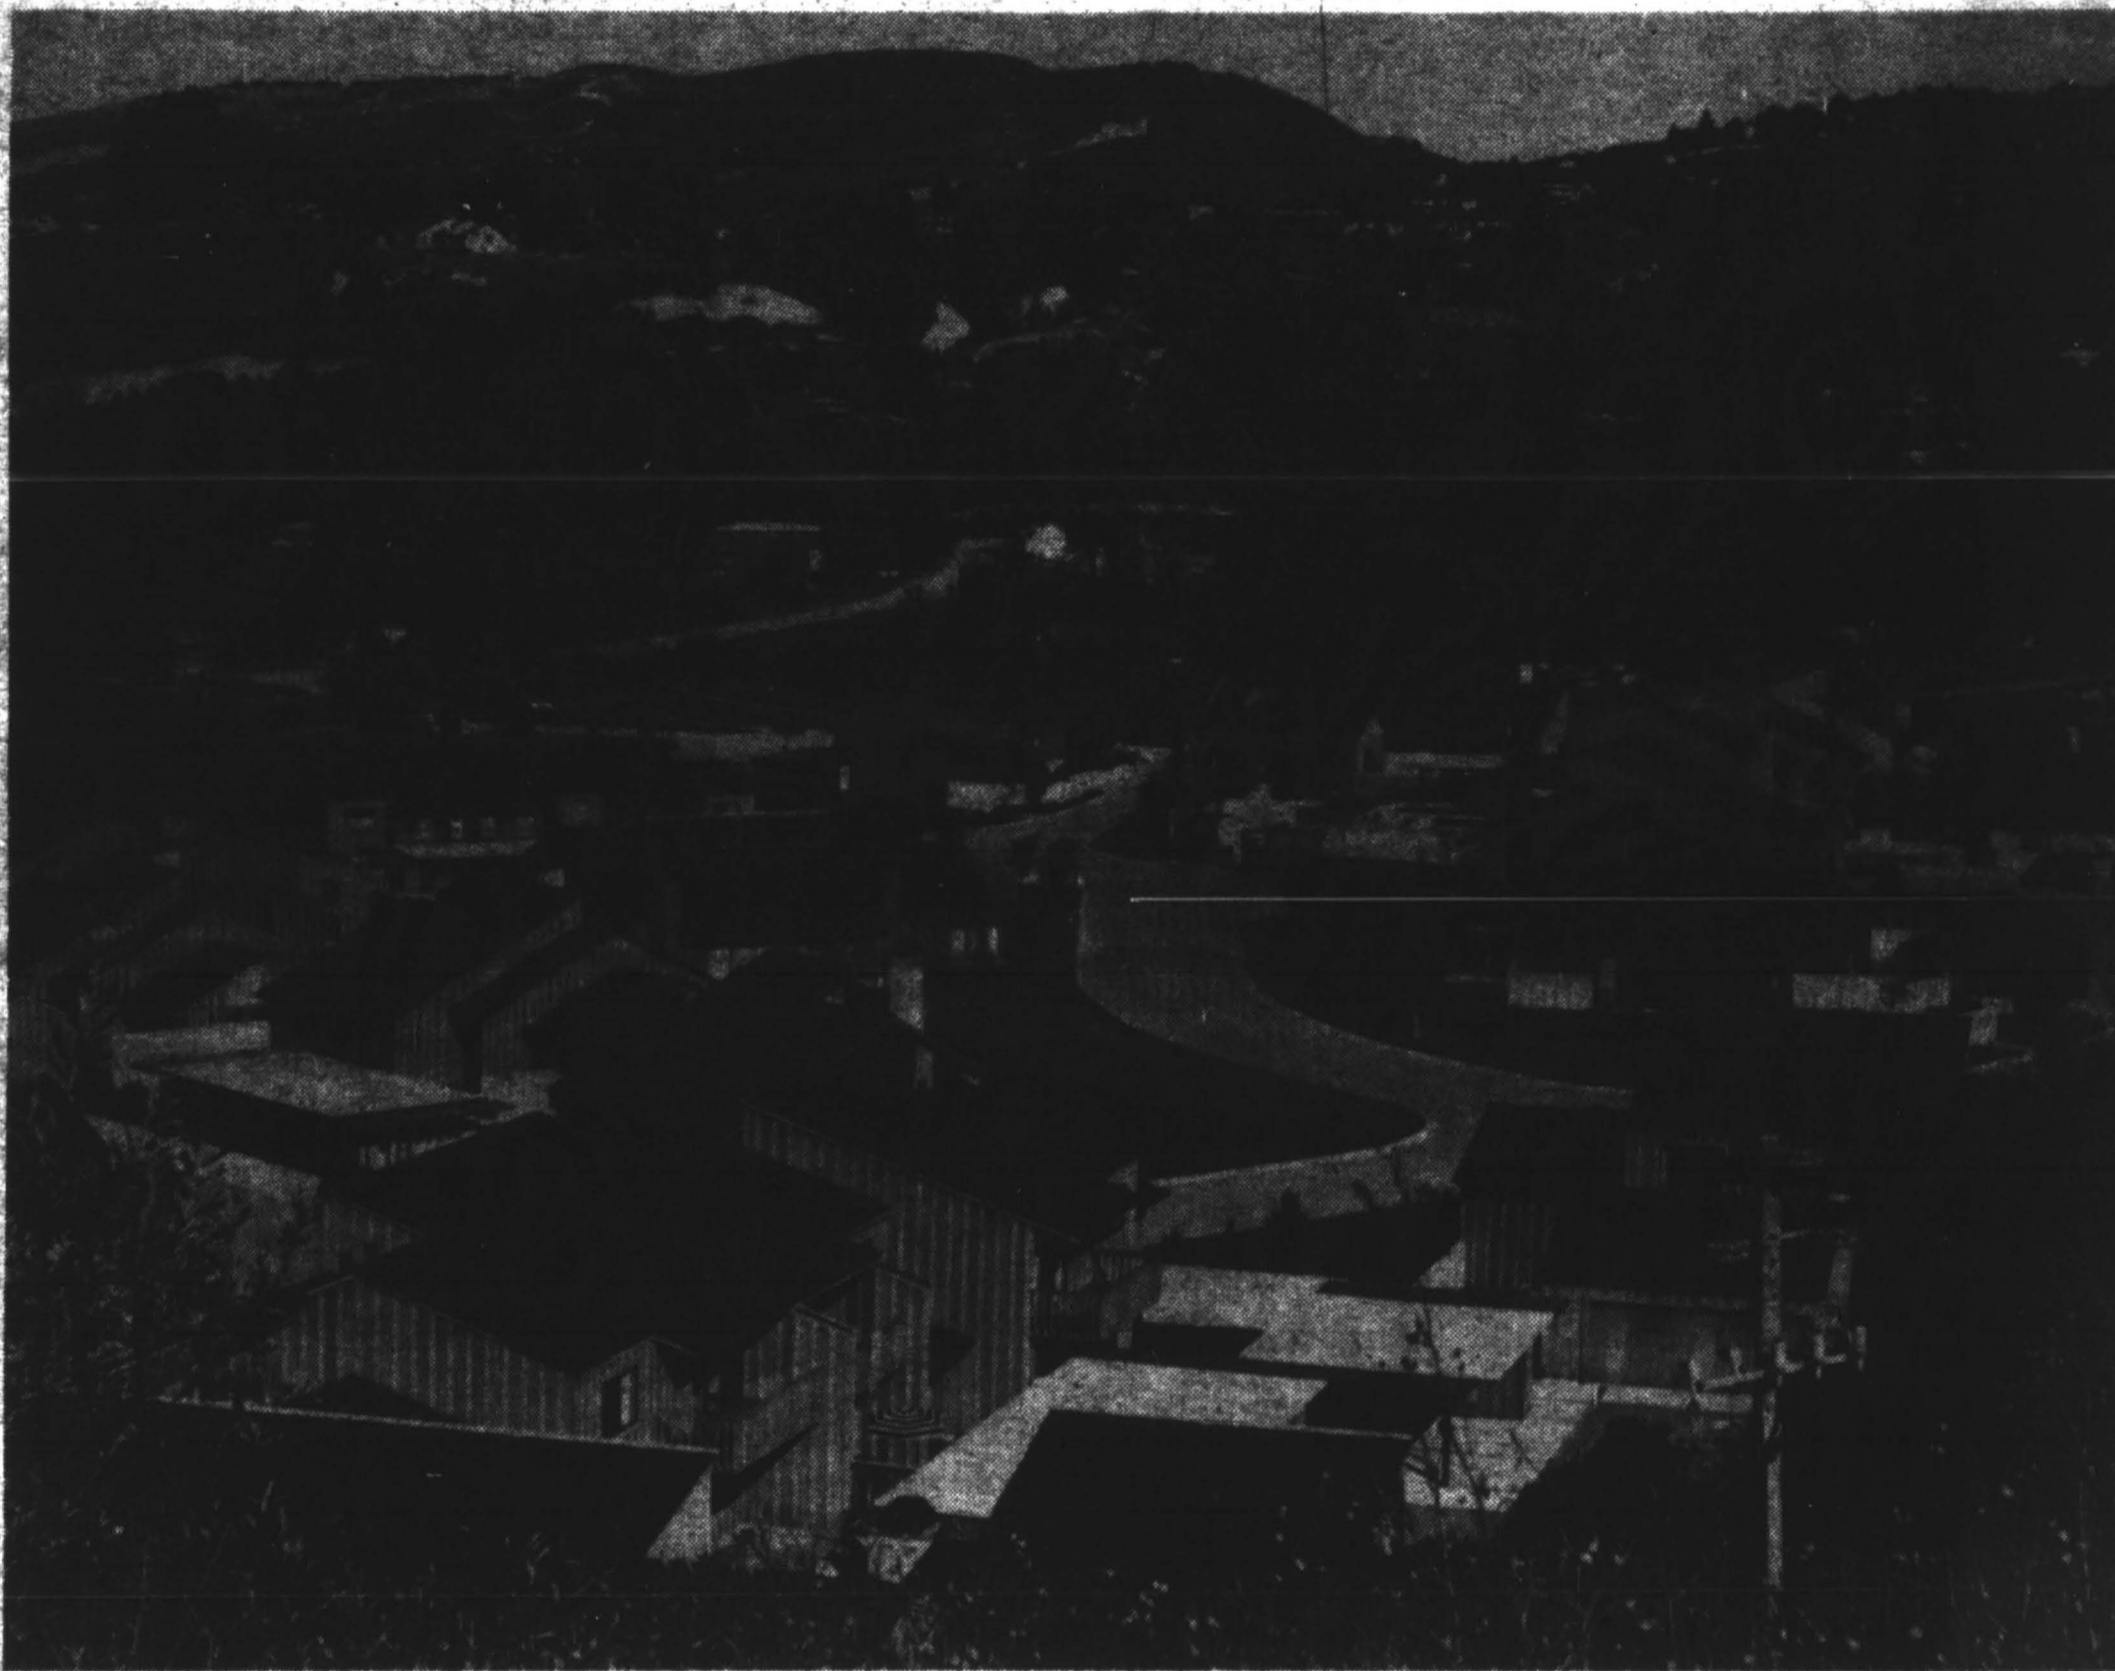

"I would if I could find housing," he said.

Page and many others with young families and middle-income jobs have been shut out of Carmel Valley by the increased land and housing costs. Other victims of the housing crunch include moderate-income elderly, practically all low-income families — and the distinctive rural character of Carmel Valley that has attracted so many residents in the past decade.

The dilemma prompted Mel Steckler, a former member of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Citizens Advisory Committee, to comment five years ago that he was afraid Carmel Valley will soon become a "golden ghetto for retired and affluent, and a rich man's suburb of Monterey and Salinas."

DAVID HENDRICKS, a Monterey County Planning Commissioner from Pebble Beach who represents Carmel Valley, said he has also used the term "golden ghetto" when he refers to Carmel Valley.

He told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that only young families who have been able to benefit from "family money" through either inheritance money or substantial down payments can now afford. Nevertheless, $205,000 is a hefty chunk for rural suburb in the past decade. The Carmel Valley Ranch homes face the Tierra Grande subdivision across the Valley.

Patricia Bernardi, Carmel Valley resident and a director of the water management district, added that a large number of builders and contractors — who can build homes cheaply — and attorneys and doctors also reside in Carmel Valley.

Actually, the price of an "average" home in the Valley has decreased by about $17,000 since 1981, according to Cardoza's figures. But that's because "people aren't qualifying" for homes as often as they did several years ago so sellers have begun to reduce their prices, he said.

On Serra canonization

Dear Editor:

The city of Carmel is becoming entangled in the maudlin sentimentality of Roman Catholicism regarding the canonizing of Junipero Serra.

The concept of canonization is pure fiction and cannot be substantiated at all from scripture. In the New Testament all Christians are referred to as "saints;" it is not a special office, title or position.

Regarding the Kinney motto: "Isn't it time Californians had their saint?" My answer as a Californian is, no. "The voices of a multitude of Californians can hardly be ignored" — your quote Jan. 26. This is one California voice that objects to the canonization of Junipero Serra on the grounds that it has no scriptural basis and it will turn Carmel into a carnival place with pilgrimages.

On "hard to document miracles," I have full confidence in the Roman Catholic mind that they will find the necessary data. Hard to find documents you say! They're impossible to find.

On the "modern Popes being astute politicians," Bishop Shubbsda must be kidding. Open your history books and read. Let me direct you to a few skeletons in the Roman Catholic closet: John XII, Urban II, Boniface VII, Boniface VIII, Benedict IX who was Pope at 12 years old through Simony, as were a lot of others. What about the warring Popes who wore the coats of mail? What about Pope Innocent III who instituted the Inquisition?

Roman Catholicism is having too much to say to the people of the state of California and to the city of Carmel.

Supports Strasser Kauffman

Dear Editor:

With the announced candidacy of Karin Strasser Kauffman, the residents of the Fifth Supervisorial District have a long awaited opportunity for respectable representation.

A professor of political science, Karin has developed and taught courses in local government and politics for the last 10 years at Monterey Peninsula College. Her interests and expertise range from infant care to the Alliance on Aging, from membership on the Monterey Energy Council to the Carmel River Watch, from land use planning to analyzing the Monterey County budget process, to name only a few involvements.

She will bring dignity and intelligence to the deliberations of the board — qualities not in present abundance. She will also bring impeccability of character and with it, the ability to respond to the concerns of the average constituent.

Karin has no future political ambitions which ensures her independence from special interests and the need for inflated campaign funding. In short, she will faithfully represent the residents of the district. For these reasons, the board of The Forest Committee proudly supports Karin Strasser Kauffman for supervisor of the Fifth District.

Good guys, bad guys

Dear Editor:

With all the class B movies that President Reagan made in his long Hollywood career, better than any of us, the president should be able to tell the good guys from the bad guys.

So what does he do? In the middle of January, he hosted Red China's Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang.

The president is supposed to know that the Chinese communists from the mainland wear the black hats. It is the Chinese from Taiwan, the Republic of China, sometimes called Free China, they are the good guys who wear the white hats.

Red China makes no secret that it expects to take over Taiwan. The communist prime minister was quoted as saying: "the Taiwan question is the main obstacle in the growth of Sino-U.S. relations."

Apparently some of those "obstacles" were removed. Two weeks later, Jan. 29, a front page new story tell us: "the United States has now proposed still more lenient treatment for China." (That's Red China, not Taiwan.)

This New York Times article explained: "the North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries are trying to update the list of militarily useful technology whose export to the Soviet Union, its East European allies or China is banned."

Important aid from the U.S. has already made the Soviets perhaps the most powerful military force in the world. That's the main reason why we spend so much on defense.

Having built the Soviets into a military super-power, it now seems that the United States, that is to say, the Reagan administration, wants to build up the military strength of communist China.

In those old class B westerns, the guys who sold the guns to the Indians always wore the black hats. Nowadays, the guys who sell guns to the communists hold high paying jobs, and they wear expensive, three-piece Brooks Brothers suits.

Brunn 'understands' area

Dear Editor:

It was a pleasure to read Howard Brunn's announcement that he will run for Fifth District Supervisor, as I have known Howard personally ever since his parents came to Carmel, and I have followed his career most of his life. I have been deeply interested, especially in his service in World War II. He understands and will promote the best interests of the Fifth District area at all times.

Maintaining sensitivity in Carmel Valley

By ROBERT MISKIMON

AS A RECENT series of articles in the Pine Cone/Outlook made clear, Carmel Valley has become — and continues to become — more of a rich man's retirement community than a rough and ready, western outpost of rural living.

The trend in housing has been toward the upper income level, with the average price of a home in Carmel Valley in 1983 at $205,000. There aren't too many freelance cowboys or devotees of the California laid-back lifestyle who can afford that nut.

At the same time, efforts continue vis-a-vis the Carmel Valley Master Plan to establish meaningful limits on development so as to preserve that elusive "rural character" so prized but so little protected in the Valley.

Although the numbers are still up in the air, and won't be clearly defined until after the county planning commission and board of supervisors have a crack at them, the proposed development limit in the revised plan is 2,500 additional residential units.

The master plan, no matter what its final shape, is a planning tool which has an effective life of probably no more than 20 years at the outside, which leaves the door open to future development depending on the conscience of future generations and/or the availability of public services (such as roads, sewage, schools).

One of the distressing side-effects of this "golden ghetto" syndrome is the increased difficulty to maintain a balanced community — in terms of age, income, and population characteristics. Demographics of the Valley have tended in recent years toward older, richer, residents with few or no children.

There's nothing intrinsically wrong with this, perhaps, but Monterey County officials are having a hard time trying to figure out a way to get some type of low-income or even "affordable" housing in the Valley to meet a 15 percent quota for inclusionary housing mandated by the state.

Bruce Moore, Monterey County Housing Authority director, recently told members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association that any kind of "affordable housing" which might be built on land in the Valley donated by actors Clint Eastwood and James Garner probably would cost in the neighborhood of $600 per month.

If that's some bureaucrat's idea of a joke, there are plenty of low and moderate income people who would like to live in Carmel Valley who won't be very amused.

THERE'S NOTHING too unusual about a wealthy community getting more wealthy and more exclusive. The same scenario has been played out many times in other areas across America.

Who's to argue that the wealthy don't have the right to live in the choicest areas, drive the best cars, play tennis at the finest clubs, send their children to the most expensive private schools?

Those are the traditional rewards for success in our system, and most people who enjoy them have earned them.

But there is a darker underside to this scenario — the persistent and troubling bifurcation of American society into the "haves" and "have-nots." Only a fool would argue that differences in wealth do not generate differences in quality of life, quality of education, and general opportunities for advancement in society.

So long as the "haves" do not become arrogant and insensitive toward the needs of the less fortunate, and so long as the "have-nots" do not become resentful and restless, the situation isn't threatening to anyone.

What's hard to face is the transition of the Valley from a down home, funky, relaxed kind of place to one with the patina of urbanity, over-refinement and hustle and bustle. Oh, well. That's America.

Supervisor William Peters calls it quits

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley will not seek re-election to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, he announced in a press conference in the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas Feb. 14.

Peters cited "personal and financial" considerations and the "strain on my family and myself" as the reasons for his decision.

"It was more than he could sustain," said Steve Slade, Peters' administrative assistant during the past four years.

When Peters' four-year term closes at the end of the year, it will mark the end of a decade of service to Monterey County. Peters was appointed to the Monterey County Planning Commission 10 years ago by then-supervisor Sam Farr and was elected supervisor in a run-off election against Neill Gardner in 1980.

Shortly before his election, civil and criminal charges were filed against him by the Monterey County District Attorney's Office alleging discrepancies in his financial statements. Criminal charges were dropped, but civil proceedings against him are proceeding and the California Attorney General is prosecuting the case.

Before his term ends he would like to facilitate the adoption of the Carmel Valley

Master Plan and the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program, Peters said.

Peters said he wants to commit more time to his private businesses, which includes a partnership in a firm that has developed a 60-unit low- and moderate-income subdivision in San Benito County. Peters also probably will become a administrative consultant to private firms, Slade said.

Three Carmel-area residents have announced their candidacies in the June 5 primary election for supervisor, including Karin Strasser Kauffman, Edward Lee and Howard Brunn.

New survey considered by city council

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL RESIDENTS soon may have another opportunity to let the city council know how they feel about certain issues without ever leaving the living room to attend a meeting.

The council is expected to discuss a potential city mail survey to gauge citizen opinion on a variety of key issues when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 21 at city hall.

In the summer of 1982 the city sponsored a similar mail-in questionnaire that focused on topics that related to the revised Carmel General Plan, which was eventually adopted in December.

Many of those questions encompassed issues that still are on the council agenda nearly two years later — second kitchens, a parking garage at Sunset Center and the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses.

The council received 1,776 replies to the survey of the 3,900 registered voters that reside within the city limits. Twenty percent more residents responded to the questionnaire than those who voted in the April 1982 election.

'Some questions were asked in a manner that leads the person in a direction without giving them an opportunity to develop other answers.'

The high response coupled with the need for more direction from the residents is why the city should develop a second questionnaire, Councilman David Maradei told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Feb. 10.

"The last questionnaire we had was the general plan questionnaire and there were a lot of questions about the way the questions were worded," said Maradei, who first brought up the idea of a new survey.

Although he believes the previous poll "was as fair as can be" Maradei said he thinks the questions on a new poll will have to be more carefully worded.

"Some questions were asked in a manner that leads the person in a direction without giving them an opportunity to develop other answers," he said.

The fate of a proposed $2.5 million underground parking garage and park complex at Sunset Center is a key issue that should be on the questionnaire, Maradei said.

Nearly 70 percent of those who responded to the 1982 questionnaire said they support a parking garage at the north field of Sunset Center.

However, Maradei wants to know whether citizens will change their minds now that the costs are known.

When the previous questionnaire was developed, the question did not include the estimated costs of the project because the city had not started a study of the proposed facility.

IN NOVEMBER a traffic engineering consultant reported to the council that a two-story, 241 space parking garage would cost $2.63 million. A three-level, 382 space parking garage would cost the city about $3.8 million, the report states.

Citizens should have an opportunity to decide the fate of the parking garage based on up-to-date cost estimates, Maradei said.

"The fact that there was no dollar value made it a wish list," he said.

The November election, when voters overwhelmingly rejected a garage and new library complex at Sunset Center was not enough of an indication of citizen sentiment because it encompassed two issues — parking and relocation of the library, he added.

Maradei said the results of that ballot clearly indicate that the citizens do not want Harrison Memorial Library moved. But he is uncertain whether the results also mean citizens now oppose a parking garage at Sunset Center.

A questionnaire on a variety of topics would also eliminate the "waste" of time and energy on some major projects, Maradei said.

"It is very time-consuming and very expensive to have the council develop a plan for a proposed change in city facilities, such as the library. It was rejected by the electorate and therefore the time and the money were a waste."

Other issues that could be included in the questionnaire are: closing Scenic Road to through traffic, expanding a city recreation program and controls on motels and hotels, Maradei said.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend and the rest of the council appear to support a new questionnaire.

"I think it is an excellent idea. I was extremely pleased by the response last time," Mayor Townsend said.

Some of the topics the mayor suggests may be addressed include: second kitchens, parking, and controls on tourist-oriented businesses.

Councilman James Wright said he supports the idea, but agreed that the questions must be carefully worded.

"I think another questionnaire would be useful. The problem that I've seen in the past is that the questionnaire was worded in such a way that when you were not sure of the answer when you got it back," Wright said.

Wright would like to see the council solicit some advice from a professional pollster to ensure that the survey questions "are not slanted" or "ambiguous."

WRIGHT SAID he needs more time to develop possible subjects for a poll. But he did add that the city definitely needs to talk to Sunset Center area residents about the proposed parking garage.

"Certainly before we build a parking garage we would have to poll the people who live in the immediate area. They're the ones who will have to live with looking at it every day and the increase in traffic, if there is any," he said.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said she has no objections to another survey.

"It would give us a chance to find out what the voters meant on the last vote (the library/parking garage scheme)," she said.

"On the last questionnaire they said they wanted a parking garage at Sunset Center," Mrs. Arnold said. "But when faced with the actual costs, the results may be a different story."

Councilman Robert Stephenson does not oppose a questionnaire. "It's expensive, but effective. I have no problem with it," he said.

Like the other council members, Stephenson believes a second survey may settle the Sunset Center parking garage question. Other potential issues probably would address topics similar to those that appeared on the last questionnaire, Stephenson said.

The 1982 questionnaire was authorized by the council after reviewing suggested questions developed by the Carmel Planning Commission and the now-defunct General Plan Advisory Committee.

Cost of the 1982 questionnaire was about $2,600.

Longtime Youth Center director Jack Giles resigns

JACK GILES, director of the Carmel Youth Center for the past 35 years, has announced his resignation effective March 5.

Giles, who is on vacation until his retirement is effective, was unavailable for comment.

He worked the Bingmobile snack bar during the Feb. 2-5 Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf Tournament, which is the major annual fundraiser for the Youth Center, and then left for a three-week vacation.

Longtime associate Peter Salmons, who retired from the Army with the rank of colonel Jan. 31, will direct Youth Center activities until the board of directors can meet to discuss the appointment of a full-time replacement for Giles.

'The Youth Center just isn't the place to go. We need to make the Youth Center the place to go for the youth of the Carmel school district.'

"I agreed to come in here because Jack was very comfortable with me to replace him," Salmons told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Feb. 8.

Salmons, who has lived in the Carmel area for more than a decade, said he still is uncertain whether to apply to the board of directors for a permanent appointment.

The Youth Center in the past has been criticized by the Carmel City Council for not offering more activities for children.

Giles responded to those complaints by saying that the Youth Center would cooperate with the city but should remain "independent of the politics" of the council.

The property at the southwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Torres Street is city-owned. The Youth Center leases the property for $1 per year. The lease expires in 1989.

Although a popular recreation center in the 1950s and 1960s, the Youth Center has lost its appeal over the past couple of decades, Salmons acknowledged.

"The Youth Center just isn't the place to go. We need to make the Youth Center the place to go for the youth of the Carmel school district," Salmons said.

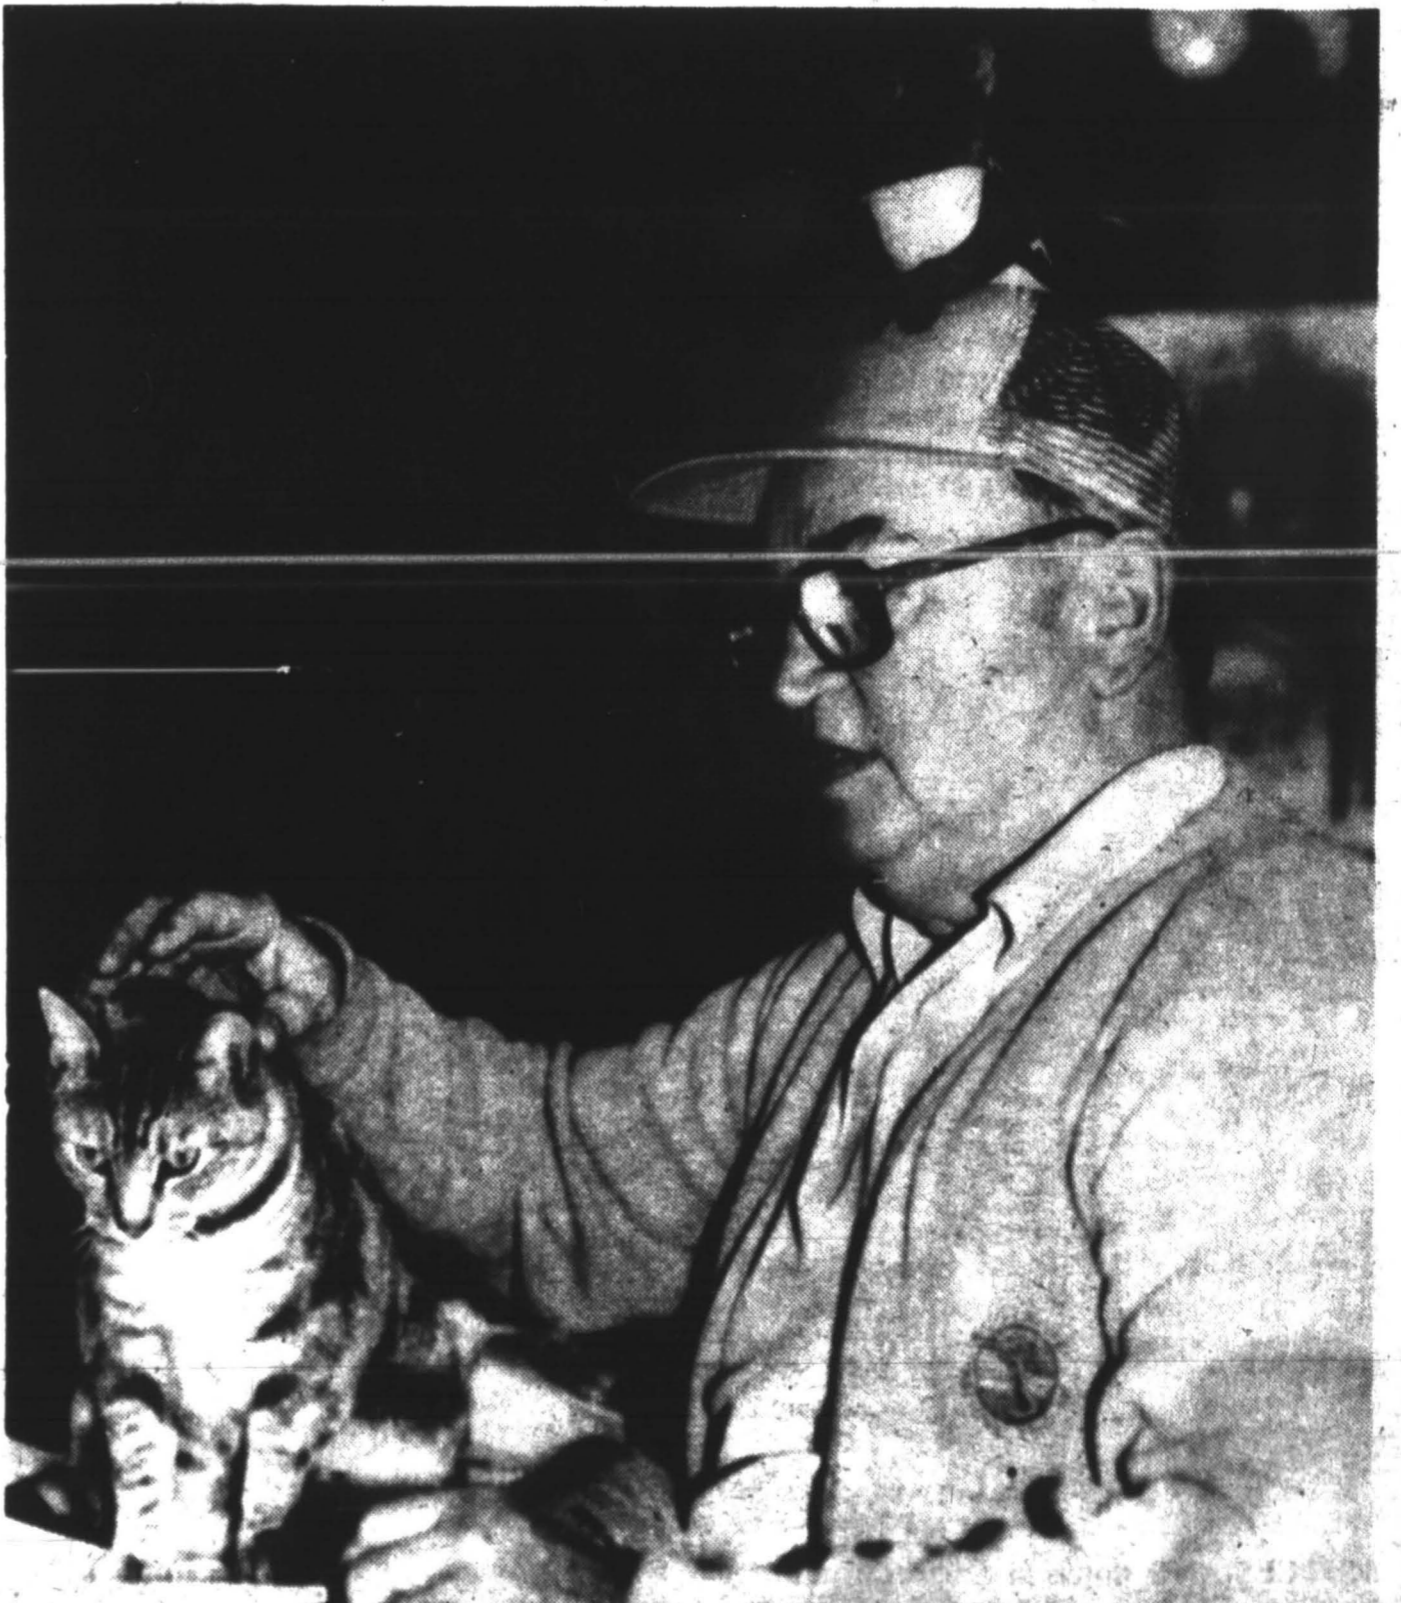

Salmons said he would like to see more structured activities in the building such as the afternoon jazzercise class.

The apparent willingness of the city council to try a recreation program will benefit the Youth Center, Salmons believes.

"Whoever is here needs to work with the city on the recreation program," he said. "They also need to work with the school district."

"I look on the Youth Center as a supplement to the school program. That's what I think it should be. I'd like to see the kids here rather than on Scenic (Road)," Salmons added.

"I personally think it's time now, especially with the interest in the city recreation program, to get the city's and the school's help in revitalizing the Youth Center," Salmons said.

BUT SINCE THE Carmel project includes the sale of reclaimed water to area golf courses, Zambory said, the district "can't possibly cooperate" with the Pebble Beach plans. "And even if we do not receive EPA funding, there are many many other questions we would have to have answers to."

One of the questions Pebble Beach resident Dave Gauvreau wanted answered is why the treatment facility would be located in the vicinity of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

"It seems to me like this is a corporation meeting," he told the Pebble Beach board. "We're talking about corporate development."

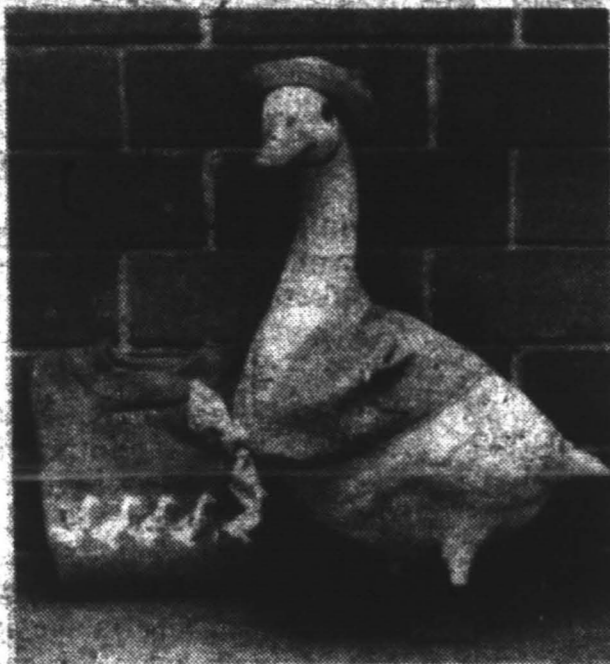

Gauvreau, who lives next door to the proposed site of the facility, asked the district to consider another site and pointed out several potential alternatives on a map.

Kawa said the site of the facility was selected because of its "strategic" location along existing hydraulic and pipeline systems.

"We understand the strategic locale of the site," Gauvreau said. "But let's talk about the quality of life in the forest and not how it is done in Los Angeles."

The Pebble Beach proposal did get a good word from at least one Carmel-area resident. Dick Heuer, a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District director from Carmel Valley, said he "applauds" the district "for looking into a comprehensive plan" that would reclaim sewage water from the entire Del Monte Forest.

Profile of a dedicated public school teacher

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(First in a series)

STEVE TAYLOR moved around the classroom quickly as if he feared that the 2:50 p.m. bell would ring before he could finish his sentence.

During his afternoon lesson on shortcuts in division, Taylor took the opportunity to work in his assertive discipline philosophy to praise ("I like the way you're working on your book without bothering anyone") and then three breaths later to critique ("store it or lose it").

At a time when teacher "burnout" is a catch word in the much-maligned world of public education, Taylor is an example of the dedication of many teachers who must tackle classes of 30 students or more for five periods a day, 175 days out of the year.

'The feeling you get in watching and helping someone grow is something you can't replace with money. You can't place a dollar and cent value on it.'

A third grade teacher in his second year at Carmel River Elementary School, Taylor is one of those bright young teachers who just about everyone in public education says we need more of in the schools.

Taylor is young enough that "burnout" still isn't in his vocabulary. He is enthusiastic and a firm disciplinarian who keeps in constant contact with parents about their child's behavior and academic progress.

In a Feb. 10 interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, Taylor talked about why he loves to teach and his style of teaching. He confidently predicted that teachers are ready to meet the new demands of public education reform.

Taylor talked with pride and enthusiasm about his profession, the teachers at Carmel River School and the parents of his students. He is aware of the criticisms, but confidently stated that "adversity breeds success" and promised that public education "is not sliding, it's climbing."

"Even in the midst of all of these negative things, I find the attitude is upbeat and there's a 'can do' response," Taylor said.

"Teachers are not afraid to change. We're ready to meet the challenge. Even the older teachers have the guts to say that there is a better way to do things than what they've been doing for 15 or 20 years."

Taylor said most teachers welcome public debate about the educational system and the trend to more community involvement in the schools.

"Morale couldn't be higher as far as I'm concerned," he said.

TAYLOR DOES think that state and federal governments — if they want excellent education — will have to support the schools far more than they do now.

In response to the recent deluge of criticisms from a variety of government reports and political campaign speeches, Taylor merely said: "We need materials, not cattle prods."

Taylor prefers to take a more positive approach to bettering public education. "All of this negativity is a waste of time. Everyone can get together and talk sour grapes, but that's not going to solve anything," he said.

'When the teacher and the parent work together as a team, they're going to be doubly effective. I don't expect them to teach at home. To monitor, to aid their child — that is what I expect.'

Instead, these people who spend so much time complaining should do something to right the wrongs, he said.

"Volunteer your time and come in and help. Talk is cheap; it really is," Taylor said. "As far as negatives about public education I've always said it's better to light a candle than curse the darkness."

Taylor also believes that it is the responsibility of the federal and state governments adequately to finance public education so that these new challenges for reform and excellence can be met.

"In my own opinion the biggest problem is the overall lack at the high government level of funding education. We're not getting enough money to do our job."

"If you don't put anything in, you're not going to get anything out."

But Taylor also is a realist and knows that for now teachers must make do with what they've got — including some class sizes with 30 or more students.

"Thirty is a full load," said Taylor, who teaches that many students daily. "But you go to Los Angeles and all the classrooms have 30. Here at River School most of the lower grades are about 20. That's idyllic."

"I think every teacher would like to have a 20 to 1 (student-teacher ratio), but of course everyone would like to be a millionaire too."

Taylor said he definitely isn't in the profession for money. His yearly salary is $17,500. After graduation from California State University, Chico he was forced to work with lumber companies in Oroville (Butte County) because teaching jobs were scarce a decade ago.

"It wasn't very fulfilling mentally, but pocket-wise it was. I made more money back then than I take home now," said Taylor, the son of former Carmel Unified School District Supt. Harris Taylor.

After several positions with the lumber companies, Taylor realized that he really wanted to be a teacher. He returned to the Monterey Peninsula (Carmel High School class of 1970) to seek work.

TAYLOR WAS a substitute teacher and worked for McGraw-Hill for about a year before he got a teaching job at Fremont Junior High School in Seaside. During the summers he ran the special education program for the Carmel school district. After Fremont Junior High School was closed, Taylor was offered a job at River School.

"If you don't get a charge out of what you're doing, you shouldn't be doing it. Life is too short," Taylor said to explain why he left the lumber business for the lower paid teaching profession.

"The feeling you get in watching and helping someone grow is something you can't replace with money. You can't place a dollar and cent value on it," he explained.

Taylor exudes enthusiasm in the classroom with a fast pace. He constantly moves between a student's desk, the blackboard and back again to the center of the room. Even at 2:30 p.m., as the school day nears completion, he appears more like he is practicing for racewalk competition than winding down to go home.

"You draw from the students. It's like a player playing to a crowd. They're giving part of it back to you," he said.

"The students motivate the teacher the way the teacher motivates the student. That's a secret to teaching. Enthusiasm is contagious. If you show that you are eager to teach, the students will be stimulated to learn."

Taylor said he is a firm disciplinarian and expects a lot from his students. He subscribes to Lee Cantor's assertive discipline theory of reward and punishment for good/bad behavior in the classroom.

As he roams the room, Taylor immediately spots a student misbehaving and gives her "five minutes on the feet," a pair of stone feet outlined on the playground where a student must stand if she or he misbehaves.

Minutes later Taylor returns to the student and questions her on the answer to a division problem. In reward for the correct answer, he removes the previous punishment.

Taylor admits he is tough, but firmly believes discipline is a key to learning.

"They know that when I'm dumping on them, it's because I care," he said. "They know the only way they can learn is to let me teach."

But if Taylor is harsh on the students when it comes to behavior, he is equally hard on himself.

TAYLOR SAID he constantly analyzes his performance at the end of the day.

"Any teacher who says they don't make mistakes is full of baloney. I've made mistakes and I go back the next day and correct them," he said.

"I sit down at the end of the day and sometimes at night and ask myself 'who haven't you reached and how can you?"

'Teachers are not afraid to change. We're ready to meet the challenge. Even the older teachers have the guts to say that there is a better way to do things than what they've been doing for 15 or 20 years.'

Taylor said it is important for a teacher to define a style that appeals to individual strengths and limits weaknesses.

"You have to define your own style. You can't copy a teacher's style. What works for the other teacher won't work for you. River School is full of good teachers but you can't go out and mimic them. Otherwise you'll fail," Taylor said.

He compared his philosophy with that of a basketball player. "You have to play with what you've got. You don't play up your weaknesses. If you're a basketball player with a lousy jump shot, you don't shoot jump shots."

Taylor also expects something from the parents of his students. Each Friday he sends home progress report cards that must be signed and returned.

"I want the parent to communicate with me. I want to hear from parents any time. They are always welcome in my classroom."

Taylor calls parents a "valuable asset" and believes they must become educational partners with teachers.

"When the teacher and the parent work together as a team, they're going to be doubly effective," he said. "I don't expect them to teach at home. To monitor, to aid their child — that is what I expect."

If the parents are sincerely interested in their child's education, they need to communicate with the teacher constantly and also lesson. "Anybody who says they don't make mistakes in teaching is full of baloney." (Michael Gardner photo.)

spend time with the youngster, Taylor said.

"Take an interest in them and their education. Insist that the teacher communicate with you. The only way you're going to know is to ask," Taylor said.

"Any teacher would welcome more parent involvement. Every teacher is open to that," he said.

Parents of River School youngsters are enthusiastic and cooperative, he said.

"I have never seen more parent-teacher involvement than here," he said. "It really makes a teacher feel good to know that the parents are behind him."

Carmel Valley Perspective

Hopes to preserve species habitats

New SPCA director strives to educate public

By VICTORIA ANDREWS

EDUCATION of the public about the needs of wild creatures is an urgent priority for Lisa Hoefler of Carmel Valley, new director of the SPCA George Whittell Wildlife Recovery Center.

Habitat protection is perhaps the most critical factor in the preservation of the denizens of the forest and the deep, Ms. Hoefler said. She hopes to see the day soon when people of all ages and backgrounds are far more conservation-minded than they are now.

Ms. Hoefler feels the tenuous balance between a wild animal's survival and man's manipulation of nature is still only poorly understood by most, and that proper education with protective legislation is the key to ecological stability.

Research on both the behavior and biochemical makeup of wild species is another of Ms. Hoefler's proposed projects. She pointed out that there is so little data available on the body chemistry of feral creatures that medical evaluation of their condition involves a great deal of guesswork.

The recent hoard of pelican patients at the center provided a huge ordeal for the staff as well as for the birds. Ms. Hoefler cited that as a period during which comprehensive blood testing might have been carried out to determine the norms for future diagnoses and treatment of other pelicans.

"You can treat the injury, but you don't know the norms, so you don't really know what you're dealing with," she said.

Understanding these norms would have its initial value in the decision of whether to try to rehabilitate a wild animal or euthanize it.

"It's a judgment call with many variables," Ms. Hoefler said in reference to that decision process. "There are worse things than death."

If the treatment would be too painful, if the injury has rendered impossible the readaptation to the wild (as with a wing joint fracture which would keep the bird permanently flightless and thus susceptible to predators), or if the recovery would be so extended that the creature would lose its essential wildness, then heroic measures have no value. "Saving an animal for life in a zoo is not my purpose," she added.

However, there have been some instances in which Ms. Hoefler said she would have chosen euthanasia had it been her decision, but said she was glad in retrospect that the animal was treated, for it recovered quickly despite seemingly mortal wounds.

One of many pelicans which arrived with badly slashed pouches underwent several suture surgeries performed by Dr. Tom Williams, as well as one done by a plastic surgeon, Dr. Dan Strickland. The tissue tore repeatedly after the stitching, and as the bird could not pick up and swallow its food, it had to be fed directly through the gaping pouch. But the bird was not uncomfortable in captivity — a significant factor.

Miraculously, on the fifth try, the stitches held, and the pelican healed quickly and was released.

Dr. Williams told the Pine Cone/Outlook that another factor behind those repeated attempts was his need to learn how to suture successfully that kind of wound. The slashes are believed to have been caused by a human, and the veterinarian said he had no way to predict how many more pelicans might arrive in a similar condition.

SPCA wildlife center director Lisa Hoefler checked on the progress of one of the several

THE BROWN pelican is an endangered species, and for those animals — especially those injured by man — more extensive treatment is usually justified by virtue of their scarcity.

Most of the patients at the wildlife center arrive for one of three reasons. In the winter, pelagic creatures — those that live far out at sea — get caught by high winds and tides and are driven inland where they cannot acclimate, Ms. Hoefler said.

In the spring, the center becomes a haven for orphans. In some cases the mother was killed while the infant was still too young to care for itself. And baby birds which fall out of nests daily are rescued by well-intentioned people who take them to the SPCA wildlife center.

Man's encroachment or outright cruelty accounts for a large number of the animals at the center. A bobcat recently had to be put to sleep after it stumbled into a steel jaw trap which mutilated its leg beyond rehabilitation. Despite years of efforts by environmentalists to outlaw that trap, the device is still legal in California.

A beaver was somewhat luckier. Found by a California Highway Patrol officer in the trunk of a car — bound and gagged and badly lacerated — the beaver was treated for two weeks at the wildlife center and then released. The owners of the car claimed they had saved its life and were transporting it to safety. Ms. Hoefler's guess was that they were interested only in its pelt.

Four part-time staff members assist Ms. Hoefler, with about 20 volunteers. In spring, the number of volunteers needed increases to about 50 as the center becomes the seasonal orphanage. The next course for potential volunteers is scheduled to begin March 7.

Staff and volunteers alike feed and give medication under the direction of the veterinary team which consists of Dr. Tom Williams, recognized as the local authority on marine mammals; Dr. Mike Murray, who volunteers his time at the center; Dr. Mark Thompson and Dr. Marty Fields. While no vet is on staff full time, a member of the team is available around-the-clock.

Ms. Hoefler, 30, is also very interested in veterinary medicine and considers it a possible future career. She acquires a great deal of medical knowledge on the job, and she has taken many courses in various aspects of wild animal care.

Before her appointment as director on Feb. 1, Ms. Hoefler had worked full time at the center one and one-half years. Before that, she volunteered several hours each week while she worked as a legal analyst and consulted for Memorex.

She loves the change of pace in the Valley from life in the fast lane as she lived it on assignment in Paris, New York and San Francisco. Still, her life now could hardly be described as serene, for she works an average of 70 to 80 hours per week at the wildlife center.

THE PROGRAM began five years ago when former director Pat Quinn, then an animal control officer at the SPCA, began to take in baby birds and developed new formulas to sustain them.

The original quarters, by Ms. Hoefler's description, were half the size of a quonset hut. Quinn was assisted by Gary Bogue, who had begun a wildlife rehabilitation program at the Alexander Lindsay Museum in Walnut Creek.

Open nearly two years, the new compound was designed by Quinn and Bogue in conjunction with the designers of the San Diego Zoo and Wildlife Park. Funds for the project were obtained from the George Whittell Foundation, which contributed $175,000 toward construction. Matching funds came from the Monterey County SPCA Board of Directors and from the general membership.

Whittell was a philanthropist who, at one time, maintained his own private zoo. It included an African lion, an elephant and a cheetah. When the three died in captivity, Whittell concluded that wild animals belong in a natural environment and established a foundation to support this philosophy. The chief beneficiaries are the Audubon Society, Defenders of Wildlife, and various SPCAs, including the Monterey County branch.

The facility is impressive for its natural simplicity and the way it functions to house the animals. Some creatures, though, would demolish the present structure in no time.

though a bear or bobcat would probably shred the netting and escape. (Photo by Victoria Andrews.)

For this reason, Ms. Hoefler has reservations about accepting a full-grown bear or mountain lion until proper housing is available.

Asked if the center has any special needs at present, both Hoefler and staff member Ed Ashworth cited several items. They noted that the bill for fish runs about $150 per week wholesale and said a walk-in freezer which could be kept outside would allow them to purchase greater quantities of fish at a lower price.

The "wish list" also includes an aluminum storage shed, a functioning pickup truck, a food processor, an autoclave, heating pads and ceramic bowls for feeding. All contributions are tax-deductible.

Ms. Hoefler has some words of advice on the subject of people who rescue wild animals. The first consideration should be whether the animal is dangerous. An injured raccoon, for example, needs to be kept warm and quiet, but if the animal is vicious in its pain, it is far better to call wildlife rescue rather than to attempt any direct intervention.

In the case of fallen baby birds, the first effort should be to put them in the next if possible. Ms. Hoefler said it is only an old wives' tale that the mother will not return to a baby bird touched by a human. She suggests that the rescuer then wait at some distance to see if the mother does return.

If she does not, and given the possibility that she may have been killed, one should then offer the bird a rehydrating formula. The formula used at the wildlife center is one quart of water to which three teaspoons of sugar and one teaspoon of salt have been added. Offer the solution in a bowl or use an eyedropper very carefully, filling it only half-way.

If the bird is warm and can be kept out of shock, its chance of survival is good. The formula is an emergency treatment only, however, and lacks sufficient nutrients for continued use. If further assistance is required, one should call the wildlife center for expert help at 373-2631.

Rancho San Carlos plans updated

New CVPOA boundary will include Cachagua

THE CARMEL VALLEY Property Owners Association Board of Directors agreed last week to expand association boundaries and its "area of interest."

The new boundaries will encompass all areas within the Carmel River watershed — which would include Jamesburg and Cachagua Valley — as well as much of Rancho San Carlos.

In other CVPOA business, two board members who served on the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan Citizens Advisory Committee announced that the committee has recommended a zoning change on Rancho San Carlos property that would only allow ranch owners to develop 500 residential units.

The CVPOA board met Feb. 8 in St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church and much of the evening was devoted to a presentation by Bruce Moore, executive director of the Housing Authority of the Monterey Peninsula. (See related story, this issue.)

But the board also agreed to accept Director Paul Beemer's proposal to expand the association boundaries to include Cachagua Valley and Rancho San Carlos.

When Beemer presented a proposed boundary change a month earlier, he recommended that the city of Carmel be included in the CVPOA "area of interest." Fellow CVPOA board members sent him back to the drawing boards.

But his proposal accepted by the board last week removed all areas west of Highway 1 from the association boundaries.

Beemer reasoned that the Carmel River watershed should be included in the CVPOA area of interest because activities on Carmel River tributaries could have a profound effect on Carmel Valley.

And residents in Cachagua Valley, who recently formed a concerned citizens committee and a homeowners association in an effort to halt expansion of an earth satellite station in Jamesburg, have asked to be included in the politically active CVPOA.

On Rancho San Carlos, CVPOA board members Charles Tillinghast and Todd Wahle announced that the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan Citizens Advisory Committee has recommended that proposed development on the 2,000 acre ranch be whittled drastically.

ORIGINALLY, Rancho San Carlos owner Arthur Oppenheimer and his representatives had asked the advisory committee to allow a 3,800-unit subdivision on the ranch.

The Monterey County General Plan already allows one unit per 10 acres on the ranch, which would have allowed Oppenheimer to build a 2,000 units.

But, after a series of meetings that ended late last month, the citizens advisory committee not only rejected Oppenheimer's application for 3,800 units but also recommended the county change the zoning to allow one unit per 40 acres, which would allow only 500 units on the property, Tillinghast said. The committee also agreed that Oppenheimer could build a 200-unit hotel.

Wahle said Rancho San Carlos representatives have indicated "they had no interest in the 2,000 units and they have no interest in 500 units."

Oppenheimer has argued that, with a 3,800-unit subdivision, he would be able to build an adequate infrastructure for his proposed "rural community" without reliance on county services. He said any reduction in the 3,800 figure would not make the infrastructure cost-effective.

The property owners association also agreed to write a strongly-worded letter to the Monterey County zoning administrator that asks him to investigate the outdoor lighting at the new Chateau Julien Winery in Mid-Carmel Valley.

Unless subsidies found

'Low-cost' housing for seniors won't be cheap

By JOE LIVERNOIS

A PROPOSAL to build "moderate-priced" housing for senior citizens on Carmel Valley land donated by actors Clint Eastwood and James Garner may not be as moderately priced as once hoped.

Bruce Moore, executive director of the Monterey County Housing Authority, told the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

'Without a subsidy, we're not going to be pulling in the homeless. At $600 a month, they are obviously not sleeping out in the streets. But we will pull those folks from empty nests.'

tion Board of Directors Feb. 8 that monthly rent for the proposed 150-unit subdivision could be $600 if federal housing agencies do not chip in subsidies.

And Moore said the chance of a federal subsidy to supplement rents at the project would be "highly unlikely."

At $600 a month, the project would be geared toward seniors of more moderate means, Moore said.

"Without a subsidy, we're not going to be pulling in the homeless," he said. At $600 a month, they are obviously not sleeping out in the streets. But we will pull those folks from empty nests."

Several CVPOA directors and some of the 25 other Valley residents who heard Moore at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church last week said they were disappointed with his presentation because they had hoped the project would be targeted for the low income elderly.

"I agree with you that the first priority is to serve low income seniors," Moore said. "And I promise you we will do everything we can to get those subsidies."

Even though the 350-acre parcel with an estimated value of $2.7 million was donated to the housing authority by Eastwood and Garner, the cost of building the project will force the housing authority to charge at least $600 a month per unit, without a subsidy.

Nevertheless, Moore said the housing authority has a "strong moral obligation" to provide housing for "moderate-income" seniors, especially since the owners of the property, including Eastwood's ex-wife Maggie, specifically asked the housing authority to build a housing complex for seniors on the site.

THE PROPERTY WAS donated to the housing authority in early December and

RENT FOR A PROPOSED housing development for elderly Monterey County residents, which would be located immediately east of Del Mesa Carmel (above) in Carmel Valley, could be as high as $600 a month if

Moore said all plans for the property are still preliminary, since several major obstacles must be overcome.

County Planning Commission has already drafted master plan policies that would practically exempt the project from many plan policies.

The major concerns are water, sewage disposal and traffic problems, Moore told the CVPOA last week. And he said he expects the "infrastructure" needed to supply necessities such as water and electricity to the project could cost $1 million.

So far, the project has no allocation of water from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

And a moratorium on annexations to the Carmel Sanitary District has been declared as the district sewage treatment plant quickly approaches its licensed capacity.

"The Carmel Sanitary District said it would be two years before they can even talk to us," Moore said.

As a result, Moore said he is considering construction of a package treatment/reclamation plant for the project.

He added that a project for seniors on the property would have less of an impact on the surrounding community than if a standard subdivision for families was built there.

A normal family household uses approximately 200 gallons of water daily, he said, but seniors use only 80 gallons a day per unit in other senior housing projects throughout the Housing Authority of the Monterey Peninsula is not able to obtain subsidies from the federal government, according to Bruce Moore, executive director of the housing authority.

For instance, special provisions must be made in the Carmel Valley Master Plan to allow the housing project and the Monterey the state.

And while a standard family unit results in five round trips in vehicles per day, a unit inhabited by a senior citizen results in approximately 1.2 trips per day.

MOORE ALSO SAID he is also investigating the potential use of several cost-cutting devices to save money in construction.

For instance, federal law forces the housing authority to hire only unionized construction firms, which can increase the cost of construction by 25 percent, Moore said.

But if a cooperative is formed and the property is conditionally deeded to the cooperative, the cooperative can build the project without hiring union construction crews. The cooperative would then sell the project to the housing authority, Moore said.

Nevertheless, the cost of the loans and services, combined with the annual operating costs of maintaining the project, would cause the housing authority to charge approximately $600 a month — "at today's cost," Moore said.

"It is highly unlikely we can get a federal allocation for 150 units," he said, especially with the frail social welfare budgets of the Reagan administration.

He said the total subsidy budget offered California by the Reagan administration to California has been used in a single project in Northern California — and that project is not as large as the development proposed in Carmel Valley by the Monterey County Housing Authority.

"The next alternative is for moderate income folks," Moore said. He said a senior citizen would have to earn an income of about $20,000 to be able to rent a home for $600 a month.

He also said that while the housing project may not provide for low-income seniors, $600 a month is still relatively cheap rent in Carmel Valley.

He said the housing authority would be vigilant in screening out wealthier seniors who might want to "take advantage" of the lower rent.

Though some disappointment about the bleak picture for low-income seniors was expressed by several CVPOA members at the meeting last week, the proposal was praised by Earl Moser, a retired Carmel Valley activist, and Willard Branson, a former

'It is highly unlikely we can get a federal allocation for 150 units,' he said, especially with the frail social welfare budgets of the Reagan administration.

Monterey County supervisor.

"While $600 a month seems like a lot of money for a person as elderly as I," Moser said, the private Carmel Valley housing complex in which he lives includes seniors who are "not rich" but who pay two-and-a-half times that amount.

THE FEATURE I like about it is that about 300 acres of land would be donated in perpetuity to open space," he said.

The property is located between Carmel Valley Road and Jacks Peak Regional Park, east of the Del Mesa Carmel subdivision.

Moore said the housing authority would probably convey as much as 300 acres of the property adjacent to Jacks Peak "to a suitable public entity for park use."

Branson, who owns property next to the former Eastwood parcel, said he was a bit skeptical of the proposal when he first heard of it but now considers it a "very outstanding, excellent plan. I think it is totally complementary to the land."

Still, according to a Carmel Valley resident at the meeting, the project would not provide housing for "where the real need is."

Moore was asked whether he has considered building more units on the property so construction savings could be made in scale. He responded that while he believes "the land could comfortably hold 1,000 units," he does not think the community in Carmel Valley would support a much larger project.

An example of a housing project geared toward low-income senior citizens under the housing authority administration is the Portola Vista project in Monterey, Moore said.

Land for the project on Van Buren Street is owned by the city of Monterey, which leased it to the housing authority for $1 a year for 40 years.

The $3 million project was built with a $2.8 million loan from the state. Moore said that without federal subsidies, the per-unit rent would be $600. But because the project was given a federal subsidy, residents pay only 30 percent of their total income. He said rents average $150 a month.

Master Plan returns to planners with a new 'buildout' proposal

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE LATEST DRAFT of the Carmel Valley Master Plan says the total number of housing units in Carmel Valley should be reduced by 243, but a proposed policy in the plan may actually increase the number of units beyond the 2,500 buildout in the original plan.

A Monterey County Planning Commission subcommittee report on the master plan issued Feb. 8 calls for a 243-unit reduction in the 2,500 units that could be built during the 20-year life of the plan.

But it also recommends that all housing projects "wholly for low or moderate income senior citizens should be subtracted from the 20-year buildout on a basis of two such units reducing the remaining buildout by one unit."

In other words, if the Monterey County Housing Authority builds a planned 150-unit subdivision for moderate-income senior citizens on Carmel Valley land donated by actors Clint Eastwood and James Garner, only 75 units will be deducted from the buildout number.

Planning Commissioner Gary Varga of Carmel Valley said the "two for one" recommendation is based on the supposition that senior citizen housing is "not likely to have such an impact" on the Valley.

Varga and fellow commissioners are expected to continue discussion of the master plan when it meets again at 2 p.m. Feb. 29 in the Supervisors Chambers of the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

The commission subcommittee presented its report at its Feb. 8 meeting. Varga said the subcommittee had not yet completed a full review of the master plan and added he expects the commission will recommend further changes to the implementation portion of the plan at the Feb. 29 meeting, at which a public hearing of the subcommittee recommendations is scheduled.

AMONG OTHER MAJOR issues in the plan, the subcommittee recommended:

- The area within the jurisdiction of the Coastal Commission should be excluded from the plan, including the ever-controversial Odello east property.

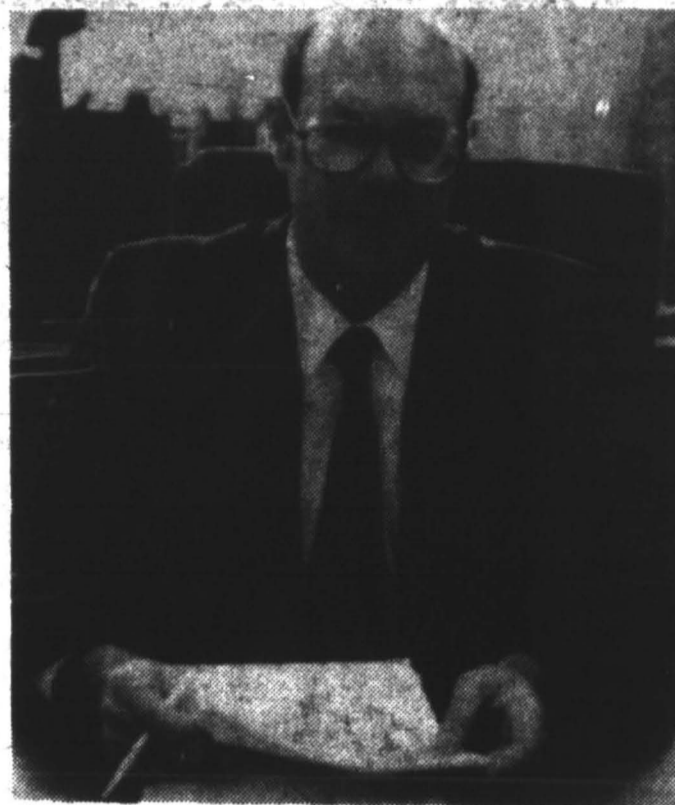

A Monterey County Superior Court judge ruled that the Odello property should be included in the master plan, at least until the planning commission decides otherwise, according to Varga.

- The anticipated buildout of other properties excluded from the original 1980 plan, including High Meadows and Mahroom parcels northeast of the Valley, should be subtracted from the 20-year buildout number.

But the plan also recommends that "because of anticipated impacts on Carmel Valley of development on the Odello property, the reduction of units from the buildout should be on a basis of one and one-half to one."

In other words, if the Odellos are able to build the 162-unit subdivision allowed by the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program, 243 units would be reduced from the buildout of 2,500 units.

- All 1980 master plan policies specific to Carmel Valley Ranch should be retained, except that the parcel at Robinson Canyon and

MONTEREY COUNTY PLANNING Commissioner Gary Varga of Carmel Valley was one of three commissioners who recommended changes to the Carmel Valley Master Plan, including a reduction to the total 20-year buildout number.

Carmel Valley roads should not be designated for commercial or office use.

Landmark Lands Inc., owner of the controversial Carmel Valley Ranch development, hopes to locate its corporate offices on a triangular parcel between Carmel Valley Road, Robinson Canyon Road and the Carmel River. A specific policy in the Monterey County General Plan would allow such a use of the property.

But Varga said the commercial land use designation on that parcel should be removed from the plan, at least until the Carmel Valley/Robinson Canyon roads interchange is built.

- The concept of "areas of development concentration" should be deleted from the plan. Varga said the Monterey County Planning Department definition of "areas of development concentration" has changed since the 1980 master plan was adopted.

SHORTLY AFTER the master plan was adopted, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver ruled the plan was invalid because an environmental impact report on Carmel Valley had not been prepared before the plan was adopted.

An environmental report was certified in 1982 and, in 1983, a citizen advisory committee rewrote the master plan based on findings in the report and policies in the Monterey County General Plan.

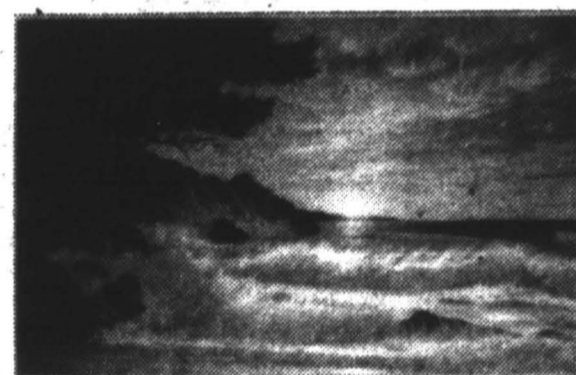

A planning commission subcommittee is reviewing the recommendations of the citizens advisory committee. The subcommittee includes commissioners Varga, David Hendricks of Pebble Beach and Peter Cailotto of Salinas.

The planning commission also released copies of a letter from Carmel City Administrator Douglas Schmitz that asks the commissioners to consider a "periodic review program" for the master plan.

"We would suggest that Monterey County, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea jointly fund an independent consultant.

Carmel Valley Perspective

Families struggle, survive, in Valley

a family. Generally speaking, according to Bruce Moore, executive director of the Monterey County Housing Authority, for every $10,000 of mortgage, buyers can expect to pay $100 a month.

The results are not surprising. Carmelo School, a relatively small grammar school in Mid-Carmel Valley, closed two years ago. Of the more than 9,000 persons who live in Carmel Valley (to Tassajara Road), about one-third are more than 55 years old.

To the elderly natives of the metropolitan areas of Los Angeles and San Francisco, Carmel Valley is still an attractive area because of its relatively open spaces. And for fast-track professionals from the cities, Carmel Valley has become an attractive site for weekend homes.

ALTHOUGH the housing situation in Carmel Valley appears forbidding to most working class families in Monterey County, there are young families in the Valley who hope to make a go of it.

After they rented an apartment in Carmel Valley Village and searched for a home they could afford for several years, Craig and Terrie Waddell finally purchased a house in Carmel Valley last year.

They prefer the Valley because of the weather and the "semi-rural setting," Waddell told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook recently.

But Waddell, a county employee, was frustrated for a long time in his search for a home until he and his wife found a house in the Robles del Rio section of the Valley for less than $100,000.

"It's a one-bedroom shack on one-and-a-half acres," he said. He and his wife qualified for a conventional loan — but the house did not. "So we had to do some financial dealing to get it."

Their home is the ultimate fixer-upper. "It was a rental for a bunch of years," he said.

Waddell and his wife live in their recently-acquired home with their four-year old daughter Jennifer while Craig and his brother, a carpenter from Santa Cruz County, fix it up. They've torn out walls, replaced the roof and continue to repair the maze of plumbing and electrical wiring.

Still, the Waddells are happy they have a home they can call their own. Most homes they looked at while they were shopping were 20 to 25 years old and between $130,000 and $170,000. They considered condos in Salinas.

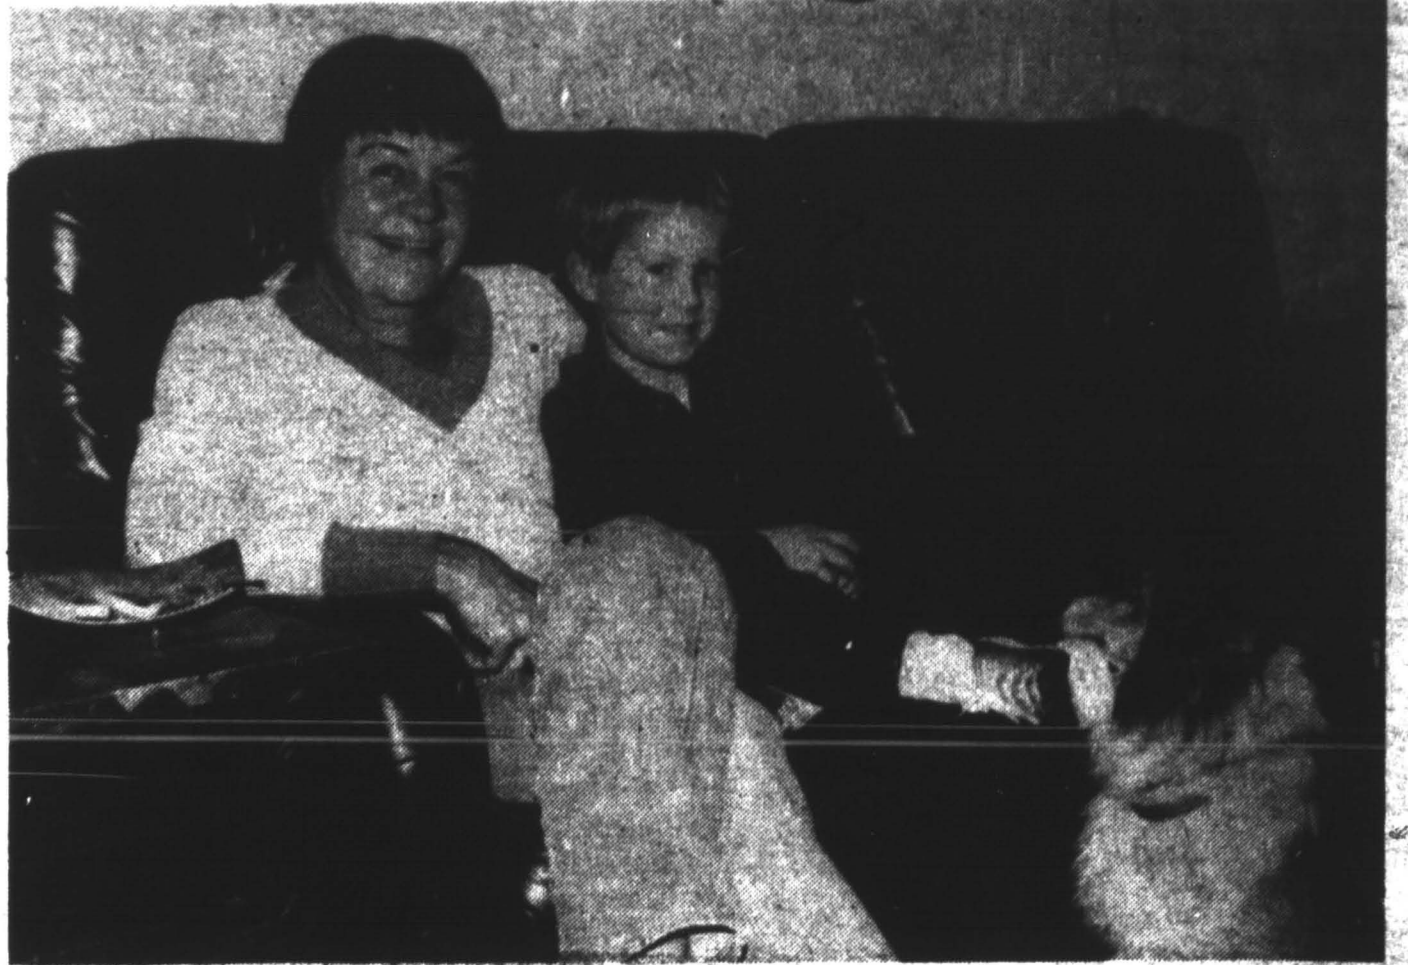

Waddell believes there are plenty of "basically poor" people in Carmel Valley who live in "trailers and shanty-town shacks. It depends on where you're at."

But it is quickly turning into a "summer resort for Los Angeles people," he added. "You can see it in people already. You've got your Porter-Marquards out here building major complexes with big bucks. That brings in outside investments and more outside interests."

Not only do they change the character of the Valley, they change the character of those who have lived in the Valley for a while, he said.

"They're now distrustful," he said. "The general attitude in the village is that unless you've been there a while, they won't give you the time of day."

TIMOTHY FRANKLIN, who lived in Kentucky and Florida before he came to California eight years ago, told the Pine

KY DAHLE relaxed with her grandson, five-year old Steven Dow of Santa Rosa, while her sheltie, Heidi, waits for kind words. Mrs. Dahle, a 27-year resident of Carmel Valley and former owner of a hay and feed store in the Valley, said the Valley has lost its agricultural character. (Photograph by Joe Livernois.)

Cone/Outlook he prefers Carmel Valley to any other area in which he and his family have lived in Monterey County because he is "used to a rural lifestyle."

So when a buildable lot far up Hitchcock Canyon Road became available, he grabbed it. And he has learned that building your own home can be much cheaper than buying it.

Franklin, a counselor and consultant, designed the 3,000 sq. ft. home for the property with a stunning panorama of relatively undeveloped green hills. His front deck offers a sweeping view of Merv Griffin's mountaintop vineyard across Hitchcock Canyon.

It was the first home he and his wife, Cathy, have ever owned. Up until then, he had rented several homes, including two in Carmel Valley.

When it was built, he designed it so his brother and mother could live in attached living space with only the kitchen for share.

A contractor built much of the house, but the Franklins saved about $25,000 by painting, wallpapering and installing the ceramic tilework themselves, he said.

It's a lofty, simple ranch-style home with detail that reflects the wonderful pride of accomplishment.

But now the Franklins are seeking a smaller living area and they are not even thinking about buying an existing home. "Build it yourself," he said. "It's much cheaper and it's yours exactly the way you want it to be. It's yours down to the door knob. A lot of people don't like to go out shopping for door knobs. But, for us, it's great entertainment."

This time, they would like a 2,000 sq. ft. home that won't be shared. He figures the property alone will cost between $100,000 and $150,000. The house itself will cost between $50 and $60 per square foot to build.

So the house will cost about $250,000 which, for a 2,000 sq. ft. home on about three acres in Carmel Valley, is still an exceptional buy.

The contractor he selects to build his new house will need to be able to work with him. Some contractors are offended when the builders ask to do some of the work themselves, Franklin said. Others are very helpful.

"THE HANDIER you are the more you can save," he said. "I know a guy who put in his own duct work for his forced air and saved $3,000. But it's the kind of thing that you've got to find a contractor willing to work with you. And you've got to be able to get things done when you said you were so you don't mess up his schedule."

Franklin said he has lived in several Monterey County locales but his stint in the city of Carmel convinced him that he prefers Carmel Valley.

"We like the climate, the sun," he said. "We like the mix of people. It's family-oriented. It's got a lot of great restaurants. Where we are, it's perfect if you don't have to commute a lot. It's quieter out here; there is not any tourist traffic to contend with. I'm used to a rural lifestyle."

Home ownership is possible — even in Carmel Valley — with a bit of luck and a firm grasp of mortgage financing, he said.

First, he said, "we happened to luck into this particular piece of property. We had been considering building a home and we about knew what we wanted to do." So when the opportunity to purchase the land presented itself, they grabbed it. "It was like deciding to have a baby," he said. "You never know if you're really ready until it's too late."

Second, he said, "we've learned a great game in financing, making deals. It's been very enlightening. In California, especially, homeowners are pretty sophisticated."

But to long-time residents of Carmel Valley, like Ky Dahle of Meadows Road, the changes in the Valley are somewhat disconcerting.

MRS. DAHLE RAISED six children in Carmel Valley and all but the oldest attended Carmelo School. They are all adults now. None of them lives in Carmel Valley — unless they stay with their mother "in between houses or jobs."

The Dahles moved to their 4,800 sq. ft. adobe home on four acres surrounded by strawberry fields 27 years ago. The children were active in the 4-H Club and the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club.

"There's only one horse and one pony left," Mrs. Dahl told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week. At different times, she had 14 registered polled Herefords, a family milk cow and up to 150 banty hens.

"We can't have chickens any more," she said. Dogs from two housing developments kill chickens.

When Mrs. Dahle and her husband, who died several years ago, bought the unique but unfinished, solid adobe home 27 years ago, they paid $45,000 for it. Even then, it was a substantial amount of money as he was about to begin a residency.

In today's market, the house is worth more than $500,000. But Mrs. Dahle said she would never consider selling. Though her acreage is zoned to allow subdivision of the property, she would never consider that, either.

Mrs. Dahle planted large trees around the perimeter of her four acres several years ago so her space is somewhat shielded from the housing tracts nearby. Still, she said, "there is no privacy."

'As a place develops, the character of people coming into it changes. Look what Carmel Valley Ranch is selling. It's all amusement.'

Back when her six children were growing up, the Bill Ingram family next door had nine children and the Bill Limas family had six children — 21 kids in all in the neighborhood.

Today, there are about four or five children in the entire neighborhood.

Five of her children still live in Monterey County, but only one lives in Carmel Valley — and he lives in the family home with his mother. Two live in a duplex she bought in Seaside several years ago.

"They would like to live in the Valley but they can't afford it," Mrs. Dahle said. She said a number of the friends who grew up with her children also live in the Seaside area. Cardoza's figures indicate the cost of housing in Seaside, at an average of $77,000, is the cheapest on the Monterey Peninsula.

Mrs. Dahle owned and operated the Hayloft, a feed and grain store located at the Farm Center on Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads, for five years before she sold it. When she owned it, the Farm Center also had a general store.

"I was the first female Purina dealer in the country," she boasted.

Today the Hayloft is gone and the general store is a western clothing store.

Feed is still available in Carmel Valley at several locations. But Salinas is the closest place one can receive hay in quantity, she said.

She said she is saddened by what has happened to the Carmel Valley she once knew. "I think it's terrible, especially down at the mouth of the Valley," she said. "The worst part is ... where all the housing and shops and law offices are. They don't conform with each other and they certainly don't conform with the rest of the Valley."

"The Valley has gone from agriculture to suburbia. It's not rural anymore."

JOHN DAVIS of Carmel agrees.

Davis lived almost 30 years at the Hastings Natural History Reservation of the University of California, located about 15 miles east of Carmel Valley Village, where the zoologist was a resident director.

"I saw what happened to Carmel Valley," he said plaintively. "In 1953, it was a neat place. There was a beautiful agricultural valley out there, but now all there is, is all those darn golf courses."

When Davis retired in 1982 and left Hastings, he never thought of moving farther down the Valley. First, he could not afford it. Second, the Valley is not as attractive as he remembers. Now he lives in Carmel on a ridge that overlooks a canyon full of pine trees.

"As a place develops, the character of people coming into it changes," he said. "Look what Carmel Valley Ranch is selling. It's all amusement. It's all contrived stuff. After a while, the whole feeling shifts, somewhat like a snowball rolling downhill."

The character of animal life also changes when an area is developed and Davis said he believes it has changed considerably in Carmel Valley.

"After a while, the diversity of the habitat is very much smaller," he said. "You begin to lose a lot of native species."

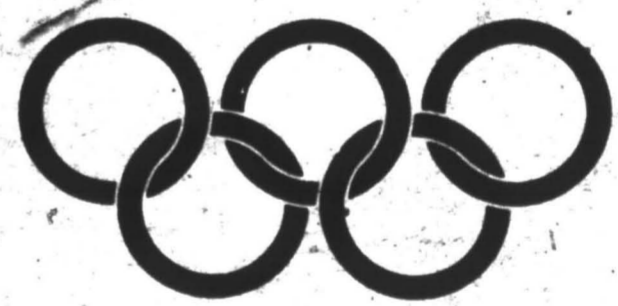

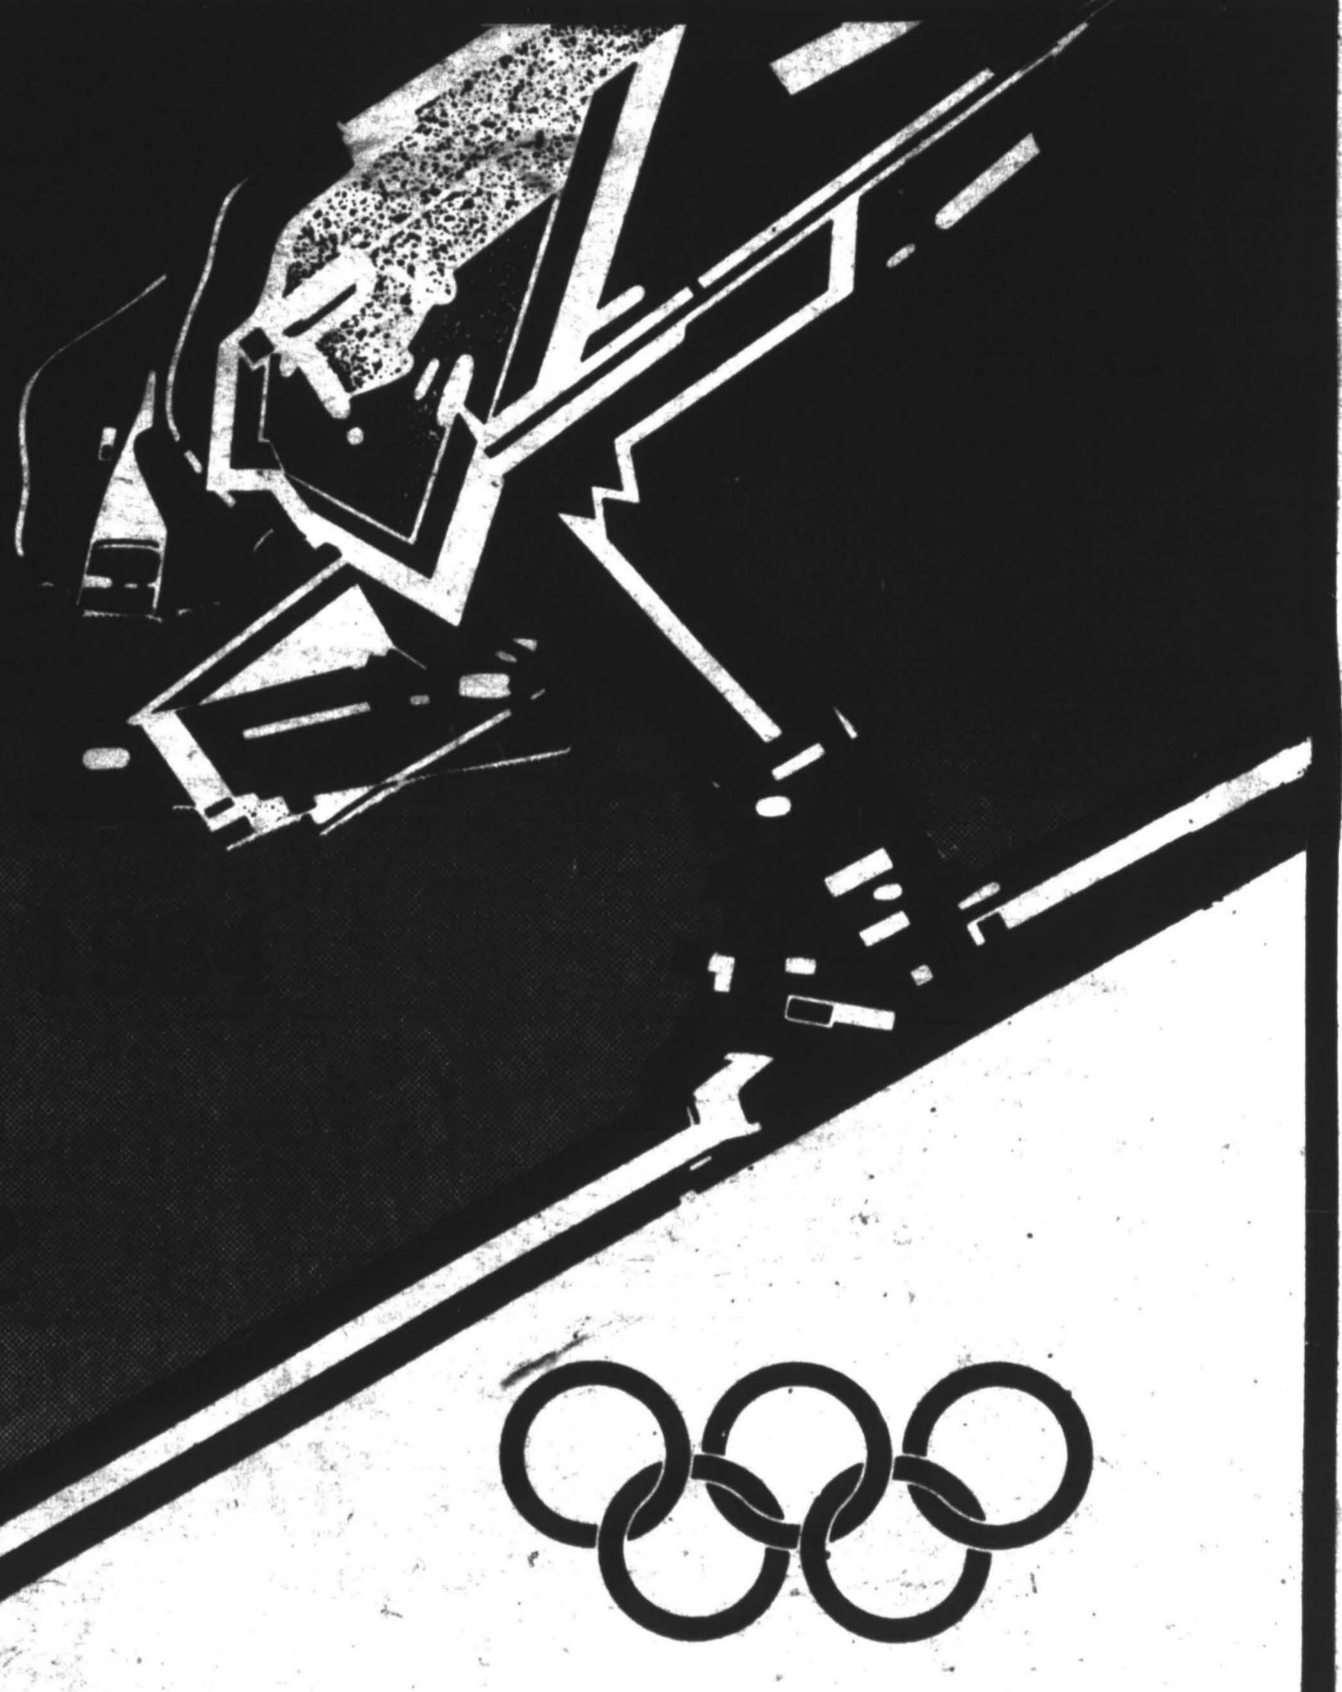

Housing developments bring noise and domestic animals, which forces most native animals into "immediately adjacent wild area" where they usually succumb to similar species that are already familiar to the area, he said.

"Variety is sharply lowered," Davis said. "You get a large number of a few species to replace the diversity of species."

Mysterious mail received at Carmel City Hall causes dilemma

Three pieces of mysterious mail received at Carmel City Hall have officials baffled about who sent it and why.

The story goes like this: planning director Robert Griggs makes his daily trudge to the post office where in the bundle of the usual mail is a plain white envelope simply addressed to "Executive Office, City Hall, Carmel, California, 93921."

The mail packet — including the strange letter — is left for secretary Pat Kelly to open. She comes to the letter. At first it doesn't appear mysterious. She opens the letter and inside finds a crisp dollar bill neatly tucked between two pieces of orange and blue construction paper.

Bewildered, she tells City Administrator Doug Schmitz. The scene then is repeated two more days. City hall is puzzled. "Why and who?" are the consistent questions.

At first Schmitz shouts "ah ha!" and claims that he has solved the puzzle. "The mysterious letters are being sent by someone who is paying off a parking ticket $1 at a time," was Schmitz' theory.

But suddenly the mail stops with only $3 received. Traffic tickets are $7 so his theory is suspect.

The only clues the city has to go on are: the Baltimore, Md. postmark; the letters are postmarked the same day, but received sporadically in Carmel; the consistent use of a one piece of blue construction paper with the other paper; and several typographical errors on the envelope that indicate that the person thought one of the letters was to be addressed to a city hall in Carmel Valley.

The case has been closed as city hall has not received another letter for about a week now. The $3 in cash probably will be deposited in the city miscellaneous income budget, Schmitz said.

Drug and alcohol group to meet

Marriage and family life counselor Tim Franklin will be the guest speaker when the Carmel Unified School District Drug and Alcohol Abuse Task Force "We Care" meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 21 in the high school library.

Franklin will discuss parenting issues such as decision-making and setting limits. Another topic to be addressed by We Care is gathering endorsements to support the anti-drug and alcohol abuse campaign.

The public is invited to attend the meeting. For more information, contact Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly at 624-1821.

City council to discuss Fourth of July

The controversial topic of July Fourth on Carmel Beach is expected to be discussed by the city council when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 21 at city hall.

The council is to discuss a continuance of the bans it imposed last year that prohibited fireworks on the beach and parking on Scenic Road during the holiday.

The council often has discussed the fireworks ban but last year was the first time a majority voted for the prohibition. The council last year said it favored a ban because of the potential damage to the beach banks, which were severely damaged in the 1982-83 winter storms.

At that time the council directed city staff to bring the issue up again in February to see if the bans should be continued.

School board schedules two meetings

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education has scheduled two special meetings to discuss finances, high school renovation and district-wide curriculum plans.

Trustees will discuss long-range budget projections prepared by Business Manager Ed Miyasaki when it meets at 3:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 24 in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Trustees also have scheduled a special Saturday study session on high school renovation plans and possible curriculum changes.

That meeting will be held at 8 a.m. March 10 at the home of Trustee Doyle Clayton, 12 Via Las Encinas in Carmel Valley.

Student representative muzzled

An emotional meeting on closed CHS campus

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A PLAN to close the Carmel High School campus at lunchtime generated more than an hour of emotional debate before the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education approved it by a 3-2 vote Tuesday night.

The campus will be closed effective this fall, trustees said.

Two trustees accused the board of violation of proper procedure, parents made emotional protests about the related "free" physical education class which gave some students two lunch periods and — after a recess — board President Robert Fenton made a public apology to the student representative for shutting him off from the discussion.

Fenton and trustees Susan Bromfield and James Yates voted to endorse the policy of a closed campus. Trustees Doyle Clayton and Pat Condren, who said they support a closed campus, dissented because they felt trustees were violating procedure.

The meeting was marred by Fenton's abrupt dismissal of comments by student representative Jason Reate, a Carmel High junior, who attended his first board meeting.

During discussion of the closed campus question, Reate questioned why the board had the issue under consideration. Fenton replied that many parents and board members were concerned that the high school should have an "educational atmosphere" uninterrupted by students leaving campus at lunch.

But before Reate could continue with his written comments in opposition to the closed campus, Fenton turned to the audience for comments. After audience discussion and further comments from the board (during which Reate had his hand raised to speak, but was not called on), the frustrated student representative interjected: "I'd like to say something."

Fenton then turned to him and quipped: "You're out of order." Several trustees shook their heads in disbelief at Fenton's remark but didn't say anything. Fenton did allow further discussion from the adult and voting members of the board who already had spoken once or twice.

After the vote to close the campus and subsequent board recess, Fenton apologized to Reate.

"I WOULD like to apologize to Jason here. I think I ignored him," Fenton said. Fenton then asked if Reate had anything to add.

But Reate replied, "no."

The incident did not go unnoticed as Imogene Speiser, Tularcitos School teacher and president of the Association of Carmel Teachers, tried to speak before Fenton called the recess.

Fenton ordered the recess, but Mrs. Speiser was called on before the board disbanded. Visibly upset, she said: "I was going to say something about the rudeness" of the board president but "I'll wait."

Although all board members said they support a closed campus, Clayton and Mrs. Condren argued for a continuance until staff could prepare a report on the costs of a closed campus plus proposed alternatives for student activities during lunch.

And the pair said that trustees usually have

CARMEL HIGH School students no longer will be able to leave the campus at lunchtime beginning this fall. The board of education Tuesday night voted to close the campus. A plan to implement the closed campus is expected to be developed by late April.

a proposal placed on the agenda as an "information" item. Then at the next meeting the board takes action on the issue.

Tuesday night was the first time the closed campus was officially on the agenda of the new school board. It had been discussed previously as an information item by the former board that went out of office late last year.

"I think you're just dead wrong," said Clayton, who along with Mrs. Condren also wanted to poll parents on the issue.

Yates said the board should make the policy decision and then allow staff to implement those actions. He said more meetings on the issue would be a "waste of time."

Yates said it is important that the community knows that the board plans to take action to better the education system and not delay issues unnecessarily.

"We are not a social safety net," Yates said in response to concerns that an open campus gives students an opportunity to make decisions on their own.

Yates added that the district does not plan to install fences and hire security guards.

"The mentality of putting a fence up of being a sheriff is a joke," he said.

Fenton said "99 percent" of the people he talked to support the idea of a closed session.

"The parents would like to see an atmosphere more concentrated on education," he said.

Additionally some merchants have complained. "There have been complaints from merchants about students swooping down over the hill," Fenton noted.

DURING THE discussion, several parents supported the idea of a closed campus while a couple of others opposed it.

One complaint voiced by parents was the fact that some students have a "free" physical education period before or after lunch. That gives them more time to leave campus and go downtown or to the beach.

The board immediately ordered an agenda item for its March 12 session to study the practice of giving students a free period once a week.

Trustees directed the administration to develop a report within 60 days on how to implement the program.

Paul Anka pleases crowd

By SUSAN CAROL CANTRELL

MEMORIES lit the corners of many minds when fragments of Paul Anka's life and successful career flickered across a movie screen on the stage at the Santa Catalina School performing arts center Feb. 10.

It was Anka's fourth benefit concert for the school and — because of sellouts the past years and the unfortunate exclusion of many adoring fans — he decided to get on with the show two nights in a row, and all for no dough!

Anka joked on stage about the lack of compensation but explained that he has a vested interest in the school, as he has three daughters enrolled there.

Of his family of five girls, two attend Robert Louis Stevenson School. Anka humored the audience with a recount of this life with six women and how, between extensive travels, he would come home to find the john lid up and become suspicious!

Such jokes were intermingled with jabs at himself, his age, height, and balding head, as the spritely Anka belted out oldies, new tunes, and pure goodies for nearly two hours without pause.

Although he played before a sedate audience, the superstar managed to charm several ladies and gentlemen out of their seats as he danced from aisle to aisle, kissed, shook hands, and even snatched up cameras and snapped shots of himself and spectators during the show.

The acoustics were so superb that the 16-member orchestra was deafening and anyone who couldn't get involved with the Las Vegas light show was truly apathetic.

By curtain call time, Anka had warbled most of his greatest hits, including "I Did it My Way," which really appealed to the egocentric element, and he had the entire audience on their feet, swaying and singing along, by the second ovation.

Many fans were present at the Friday night cheese and wine reception which preceded the first concert. "We're great fans," said Jim Long of Monterey, who accompanied Pat MacQueen of Monterey. "We've followed his career. He's the most talented singer in the universe."

Daun La Grange of Pebble Beach commented: "I saw Anka as a kid." Another fan, Bill Lee of Carmel, previous owner of Billy Quon's restaurant, said: "I always go to Las Vegas to see him."

Bill will open a new restaurant, The Point, this month and donated a delicious round of liver pate in aspic for the reception.

Cheeses were also provided by local shops and Taylor California Cellars poured delectable wines by the gallons to thirsty concert-goers.

A huge canvas tent was set up to shelter guests who rubbed elbows and bumped minks in a flurry of conversation before the concert.

Among the guests were Cynthia Anka and Robbie Evans of Carmel; Jim Morton, a resident faculty member of Santa Catalina School who "used to deliver the Pine Cone newspaper;" and Jane Day of Pebble Beach, who had been appointed to the Monterey County Board of Education that day.

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS BENEFIT A SELL-OUT

The world of spring fashions was on view at the Corral de Tierra Country Club Feb. 11, when The Crossroads presented a fashion show luncheon to benefit the Tri-County Multiple Sclerosis Society and VIMS (volunteers in multiple sclerosis) chapter.

NANCY MANDEL of Pebble Beach, Laurie Hall of Pebble Beach and Susie Chatham of Pebble Beach (from left) all have children who attend Santa Catalina school.

ELIZABETH SMITH of Salinas (left) and her mother, Mrs. John Bissell of Carmel, attended the multiple sclerosis benefit fashion show.

"Hearts that care — share" was the credo on invitations and the theme tied in nicely with Valentine's party favors, red balloons and the red carpet that was rolled out for guests and models.

After a luncheon of pineapple-chicken boats, croissants and vanilla-strawberry ice cream, the show got underway. Phyllis Hubbard of Pebble Beach was the charming mistress of ceremonies who opened the parade with: "If any of you have never been to The Crossroads, you're in for a real treat!"

First on the ramp were Judy Bartholomew and Merv Sutton, both of Carmel, who represented Expressions, in airy purple jogging clothes. They were followed by Tina Lombardo of Monterey who modeled — guess what? — an attractively draped sheet with a pillow case tied on her head, from Scandia, Down.

Show stoppers were youngsters Amy and Stacey Gray of Carmel, red-headed sisters who modeled play clothes, and carried lunch pail and knapsack from Bib 'n Tucker.

Dottie Murphy of Pebble Beach strutted a silk broadcloth jumpsuit for Isadora's and Barbara Conklin of Carmel was the piece de resistance in a valentine red camisole and panties from Charnel's.

Mrs. John Bissell of Carmel enjoyed the event with her daughter Elizabeth Smith. "I got involved collecting for multiple sclerosis because no one else will do it," she said.

Piccadilly will soon be abloom

"Spring showers bring May flowers."

And there will be a lot more flowers in Carmel this May thanks to the expected opening of the long-delayed Piccadilly Park, west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz has unveiled a time schedule that envisions completion of the approximately $65,000 Piccadilly Park landscaping project by mid-May.

Under Schmitz's schedule, landscape architects may review the plans for the park beginning Feb. 10. Bids will be accepted up until March 5, the date the bids will be opened.

The city council on March 6 is expected to award the bids. The contractor then has five days to sign the contract and another 15 days to begin work. The landscaping is to be completed by the end of May, according to Schmitz's schedule.

Wedding Faire Feb. 5.

Booths were erected around the hall to offer information on every conceivable service for the perfect wedding.

Among the 18 participating businesses which offered assistance to brides, with displays, gift ideas and demonstrations, were the Holiday Inn Carmel, Allen and Co., Dick Bruhn's Inc. and Carmel Studios. A touch of class was also offered by Limousine d'Elegance of Carmel and why not some heavenly harp strains by Norel?

Harpist Jill Cullen, Monterey String Trio, Crossroads and Mistretta and Morgan embellished the atmosphere while several fashion shows were given throughout the day.

The affair was presented to benefit the Family Service Agency of the Monterey Peninsula, a non-profit organization since 1947, which provides professional help to families, individuals and couples who are experiencing emotional problems.

It is a full service counseling and therapy center staffed with licensed professionals with, at minimum, a master's degree in the field of psychology and five years of clinical experience. The services are available to everyone on the Monterey Peninsula regardless of race, creed, or financial status and includes individual psychotherapy, sex counsel, separation and divorce counseling, group therapy and workshops and a senior outreach program, which is an in-home service to "assist older people who are experiencing difficulty in coping with daily activities."

Funding is received from United Way, city revenue sharing, several foundations and benevolent organizations, Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Service and a membership auxiliary, which allows the agency to give assistance based on the client's ability to pay.

Chairpersons for the Wedding Faire were executive director Don Hoyland of Carmel, who was assisted by Kathleen Davis of Monterey. Also assisting were: Lib Downey of Monterey, president of the Family Service Agency Board, Neil Fearn of Carmel Valley, Nancy Forbush of Monterey, Vonda Tibbitts of Carmel, Jean Proto of Carmel, Sylvia Chase of Monterey, Bob and Ellen Louise Rowland of Carmel, Ben Heinrich of Carmel, Veronica O'Brien of Salinas, Sue Lloyd of Carmel Valley and the staff of the agency: Jane Wright, John Downing, Dorothy O'Connor and Lois Epel.

PRINTING

How long will it take PIP to print my job?

Q&A

It depends on how many copies you want. PIP can print many jobs While-U-Wait, especially 8 1/2" x 11" or 8 1/2" x 14" printed in black ink on one side. The PIP printer can show you how to prepare your copy so that it is "camera ready" when you bring it in, cutting the time it takes to complete a printing job. If you have special orders, such as colored ink or printing on two sides of the page, your PIP printer will go over the details with you, and give you an exact time you can expect your completed job. PIP printers meet your printing deadlines.

Prunedale men arrested in car heists

Two young men from the Prunedale area were arrested in connection with six vehicle burglaries in Carmel. More than $5,000 worth of property was recovered.

Carmel Detective Sgt. Warren "Pete" Poitras reported that Tom Jason Fleming, 18, was arrested Feb. 8 and John Clay Hudson, 19, turned himself in at the Carmel Police Department the next day, accompanied by an attorney.

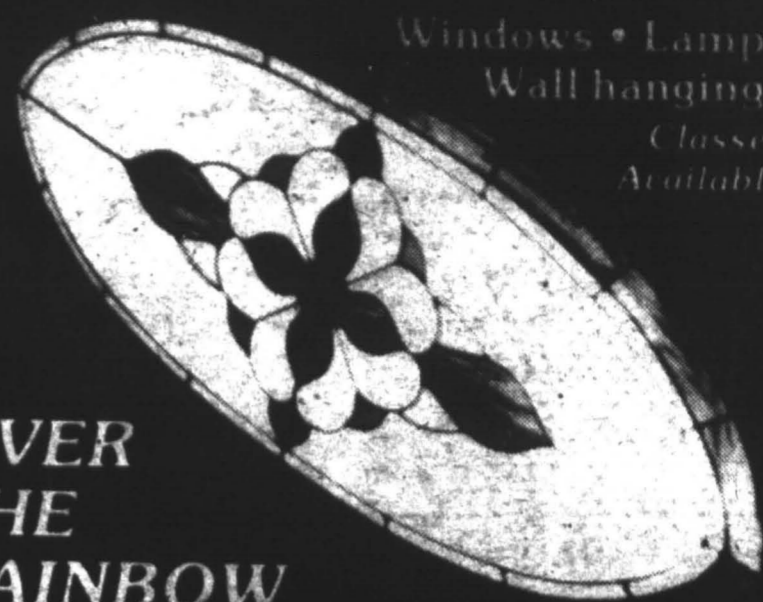

Sgt. Poitras gave credit to Sgt. Jon Bowman for the initial contact with the two suspects. Sgt. Bowman noticed the two youths "hanging around and behaving suspiciously" on San Antonio Road Sunday night, Feb. 5. He questioned them and found property on their persons that was later determined to have been stolen in a recent vehicle burglary.

Officer Steve McKim, Sgt. Bowman's backup at the time of that first contact, worked with Poitras in the investigation that followed. It led to issuance of search warrants for the homes of both suspects and the discovery there of property taken in the six burglaries, including stereo sets, briefcases, binoculars, tools and a camera.

The same suspects are thought to have been involved in burglaries in Salinas as well; more than $2,000 worth of stolen property from those cases was also found by the Carmel officers.

Both Fleming and Hudson are currently out on bail.

Business BeatCatching up with localites*

By FLORENCE MASON

IT'S catch-up time! This column necessarily deals first with new businesses, new shops and business-related issues; the names of local business and professional people who are honored, promoted or otherwise newsworthy must bring up the rear (of the column, that is).

This week, for a change, I will highlight such localites whose accomplishments have been piling up on my desk. Only a few typical business beat stories will precede those notes.

FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA TO NEW YORK TO CARMEL

A Carmel couple whose background makes them especially appreciative of the delights of living in America — and on the Monterey Peninsula — are the owners of a new business in Pacific Grove.

Gustav and Slavka Ulch fled from Czechoslovakia just before the Russians sealed the borders. "That was the first big step in our lives," said Slavka. They came to New York, where Gustav's brother had lived for a number of years, and Gustav set up a business that gave him the opportunity to use his considerable talents as an auto mechanic.

His brother told them about the special pleasures of California, and, especially, a town called Carmel. The couple eventually set out across the country to see for themselves. That led to "the second big step in our lives," their move to Carmel and the purchase of a home here.

Last month Gustav opened Gustav's Autohaus at Presidio Boulevard and Highway 68 in Pacific Grove. It's a one-man operation now, but as business grows, he plans to bring in additional employees. The business is housed in a brand-new and very attractive building that blends in well with its rustic surroundings.

The family influence goes back a long way. Gustav was brought up in a family that owned an auto repair business in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, since 1925. In that country, to become qualified as an auto mechanic required an education in itself: four years in auto mechanic school, followed in his case by advanced training with Fiat. He ran a Fiat dealership in Pilsen and later, one in Switzerland where he specialized in training mechanics.

Now, Gustav Ulch works on foreign cars of all types, while Slavka handles the business end of things. They have a daughter, Margarita, who is married and lives in Berkeley. In their free time, both Gustav and Slavka enjoy gardening at their Carmel home, and walking on the beach.

MYRON'S ELEPHANT IS COMING

Early in March is the tentative date for the opening of Myron Sponder's new restaurant at Sixth and Mission. When I asked him what would be on the menu, he said: "Simple food."

When I pressed for details, I got a few. To Myron, simple food means "no creamed stuff." He mentioned hamburgers, chicken and pasta — plus homemade pies.

What has Myron Sponder done before? "Oh, lots of things. I'm basically retired," he said. The first time I called I talked with daughter Debra, who, her father said "just happens to be helping out."

As for the unique name: "Well, Myron is my name," he said. "The rest is personal philosophy." That fits right in with his characterization of his new restaurant as "a personal kind of place."

VANTAGE POINT

There's a brand new magazine which emanates from offices on the Monterey Peninsula. It is Vantage Point, a bimonthly photographic magazine "to put forth an outstanding showcase of beautiful, creative and stimulating photographic art."

That's the word from publisher Douglas Lepley. Lucas Blok, Carmel artist and graphic designer, is the editor/art director.

Dick Garrod, who recently retired as community development director for the city of Monterey, is consulting editor.

The first offering is impressive. There are four-color reproductions on high-gloss paper stock, with no advertisements. This first issue will be of particular interest to Carmel and Carmel Valley residents, since it features an interview with local photographer Brett Weston, written by Robert Neubert, and a portfolio of Weston's latest work.

AND NOW — NAMING NAMES

There's at least one Carmel connection in plans for the new Gallatin's Restaurant in Monterey, which will open this spring. Charles Gruwell of Carmel will coordinate the interior design for Gallatin's, which will operate under a long-term lease in the historic Stokes Adobe. Gruwell's contributions include a striking entry foyer furnished with period pieces, and a full bar with a balcony area which overlooks it.

The owners of the restaurant are Bill Mollring and Tracy Call. Rick Johnson of Monterey will be its manager. If that name is familiar to you, it may be because he was associated with Billy Quon's in The Crossroads.

A Carmel public relations firm, Gibbs and Soell, Inc., has been selected to handle a national product publicity program for STC Systems. STC Systems, based in New Jersey, manufactures micro, mini and mainframe business computer systems. It also provides computer systems designed exclusively for building and home supply companies, publishing, apparel and electric industries.

Gibbs and Soell has headquarters in New York and offices in Houston and Chicago as well as Carmel. It specializes in scientific and electronic industries.

Sun Studios Jewelry, tucked away on the lower level of Carmel Plaza "behind the escalator" has new owners: Carol and Lee Andrews. The shop, which has been there since shortly after the Plaza opened, will continue "basically the same." In addition to sales of jewelry, Carol and Lee will offer custom work, repairs and an appraisal service.

Another new business in Carmel, which occupies "a little office" above Hampton Court at Seventh Avenue and San Carlos Street, is owned by David Cummings. His business —

A graduate of the University of Arkansas and William and Mary College, she is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the National Association of Securities Dealers, and the Securities Investor Protection Corp.

Lynn Brooks has been named director of volunteers for Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital. The long-time Carmel resident will coordinate the 200-member hospital volunteer Service League, which provides 40,000 hours of service and $50,000 to the hospital through its gift and coffee shops annually.

Gordon Paul Smith has been elected to the board of directors of Monterey County Bank. Smith, a Carmel Valley management consultant and former state director of finance, is also a former vice president in charge of management consulting operations for the firm of Booz, Allen and Hamilton. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Monterey Institute of International Studies, chairman of the board of the West Coast Cancer Foundation and president of the board of the Palo Alto-Stanford University Medical Center. His financial management career spans more than 30 years.

April Green is a new partner in the Carmel-CPA firm of Hanson, Rotter and Associates. Ms. Green, chosen as an Outstanding Young Woman of America in 1981, received her CPA certificate in 1980. She joined Hanson, Rotter that same year after working for Price, Waterhouse Co. in Los Angeles and Main, Hurdman and Cranston in San Francisco.

Like many others, Michael Sarmiento became acquainted with the Monterey Peninsula through military service — in his case at the Defense Language Institute in 1970. He has just returned to make his home here and to work with the Pebble Beach Co. as manager of planning and development.

In between, Sarmiento was president of his own firm, 3M Design/Construction Group, in Sacramento. There he specialized in the design of environment systems for computer equipment. He has also been a contractor for both residential and commercial developments and marketed architectural environmental planning services.

Sarmiento's responsibilities with the Pebble Beach Company will include local agency and governmental planning coordination; implementation of Del Monte Forest land use, zoning and architectural matters; and special projects for the real estate division.

George Churilla spent part of last month in Marco Island, Fla., where he was briefed on the American Express 1984 product line — a preview of tours to Europe, China and the Orient, Mexico, South America and the United States.

Churilla is associated with Bob McGinnis Travel in Carmel Rancho Center.

Betty Sammis is the new manager of the Sakura Beauty Shop, in the Bell Court at Seventh Avenue and San Carlos Street. "I'm turning my hobby into a second career," she said.

Mrs. Sammis worked for IBM for many years, and then retired. Next, she and her two daughters decided to go to school together. Now daughter Suzanne Fisher, whose idea that was, works with Sim and Friends in Carmel Plaza and daughter Linda Ketenjian has just joined her mother at Sakura.

Betty and her husband Bill bought their Carmel home in 1969. Bill is manager of the shoe department at Peck and Peck in the Plaza.

Out-of-town owners Willard and Cha Sun Irwin will close Michele's, the women's apparel shop at Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street, which opened less than two years ago.

Debbie Bradburn Tiernan, who inaugurated the marketing program for The Crossroads, has moved on to form her own public relations and marketing company. Her aim is to help non-profit organizations and small businesses with their advertising and public relations. More about that will appear in next week's column.

Carol Williams, owner of Photography West Gallery/Graphics, has taken out a second business license — this one for an office for the gallery. It's a place where she can handle details of shipping and receiving, and store some of her graphics. Where? Upstairs on the east side of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh avenues, just down the street from the gallery.

THEY HAVE A HEART!

Three Carmel residents are the first to respond to our "Have a Heart" program, and as a result it was an especially happy Valentine's Day for two local non-profit organizations.

Mary Homuth, who has lived in Carmel 15 years, warmed the heart of the Tor House Foundation with her gift of a fireplace screen.

"I brought a screen with me, and the house here has one that's built in. So when I saw in your column that the Tor House could use a screen, I was happy to offer it," she said.

Another local donor preferred not to have her name used, but we can tell you that through her generosity a large, beautiful tablecloth "that had just been sitting around" will now grace the table at Monterey County Symphony Association receptions.

The third Carmelite to come forth with a gift — this time of his own talents — is Richard LaSalle. LaSalle called to say that he is a member of the Rotary Club, and its photographer, and that he would like to offer his services to the Monterey County Symphony Association. That organization had listed "services of a photographer" as one of its "Have a Heart" requests.

We thank all these Carmel residents for their thoughtfulness. Still out there as Valentine's Day wishes are: saleable merchandise for the SPCA shop; a station wagon for the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross; a large printout lateral file for music storage; a secretary's chair or calligraphy by a volunteer (for the Bach Festival); service on a Minolta 12A copy machine for the Cherry Foundation; four new radial tires for the Children's Experimental Theater's Ford Econoline van.

New Rotary fund honors Farrell

The Rotary Club of Carmel-by-the-Sea has created a new fund within the Monterey Peninsula Foundation to make charitable donations in Carmel and elsewhere. Named in memory of Father Larry Farrell, the beloved priest, poet and historian who passed away in July 1983, the fund was created by a large initial donation from a Carmel Rotarian, and other subsequent gifts from Rotary Club members have brought the fund's assets to more than $16,000.

The fund is a permanent endowment fund in the Foundation, from which the interest will be used for donations to youth and local community projects or services, and some international programs. The Rotary Club will advise and recommend grants to the Board of Governors of the Monterey Peninsula Foundation, which has final say on the grants to be made.

The fund is expected to grow substantially over the years, since the Foundation can accept donations to the fund from Rotarians or from anyone with a special interest in the Rotary Club, local charities, and Father Farrell.

Visiting nurses available for homebound patients

Homebound patients recovering from accident or illness can now get help seven days per week with light housekeeping, preparation of light meals, grocery shopping and personal care, such as bathing.

The Monterey Peninsula Visiting Nurse Association homemaker services have expanded coverage to include weekends because of an increased demand for this kind of help. For those in financial need, VNA offers a sliding scale of fees, based on ability to pay. Homemaker services are not covered by Medicare or by most private insurers.

The Visiting Nurse Association, a 32-year-old, non-profit home health agency, also provides home nursing, physical, occupational and speech therapy, nutritional counseling and the services of a medical social worker. These home care services are also available seven days per week and are covered by most health insurance plans.

For further information about VNA homemaker services, contact Rebecca Burton at 373-4337. For information about other services, call the VNA main number, 375-9537.

The American Medical Association warns that older people are second only to small children as likely victims of scalding, the most common cause of serious burns. This is because older people's reaction times have often slowed, making it impossible for them to get away fast enough from exposure to hot water.

Manufacturers of water heaters usually preset the heaters at 140 to 150 degrees. Such temperatures can cause third-degree burns, destroying a layer of skin, with just 2 to 5 seconds of exposure. The AMA urges older people to reset their water heaters to the 120-to-130 degree range, which would allow a full ten minutes of exposure before causing a third-degree burn.

Bark it, Sonny

A REGAL VISITOR from Oregon had a convenient vantage point through the sun roof of an automobile from which to watch the passing parade of life on San Carlos Street as she maintained a lonely vigil for her sightseeing ministers last week. Obviously, these escapees from the doggie-dog world of Oregon brought their own car to Carmel. They didn't leash it, but perhaps next stop they will bark it on the sunny side of the street, doggonit. (Photograph by Joe Livernols.)

'La Ronde' opens at Cherry Hall

LA RONDE, Arthur Schnitzler's comedy of social and sexual mores, comes to Carmel Feb. 17 for a limited engagement at the Cherry Foundation Theater.

Startling in its honesty about human relationships when first presented in 1896, the play retains much of its original relevance and charm as directed by Greg Fritsch and David Zarco. The cast includes Santa Cruz actors Armon Stover, Ray Hoffman, John Flynn, Sunny Reale, John Bechtel and Laura Long.

Produced by the Santa Cruz-based Rainbow Ensemble for the Performing Arts, the production is on tour in Carmel following a run in Santa Cruz and a two-week engagement at the Valencia Rose Theater in San Francisco. La Ronde is the first show in a planned continuing exchange of performing arts programs between the Rainbow Ensemble and the Carmel area.

La Ronde plays Friday and Saturday, Feb. 17 and 18, and Friday through Sunday, February 24-26, at the Cherry Foundation Theater. Tickets, available at the door, are $6 general, $5 for students and seniors.

This project is supported in part by a grant from the Cultural Council of Santa Cruz County. The Cherry Foundation is on Guadalupe at Fourth in Carmel.

For more information, call the Cherry Foundation, 624-7491.

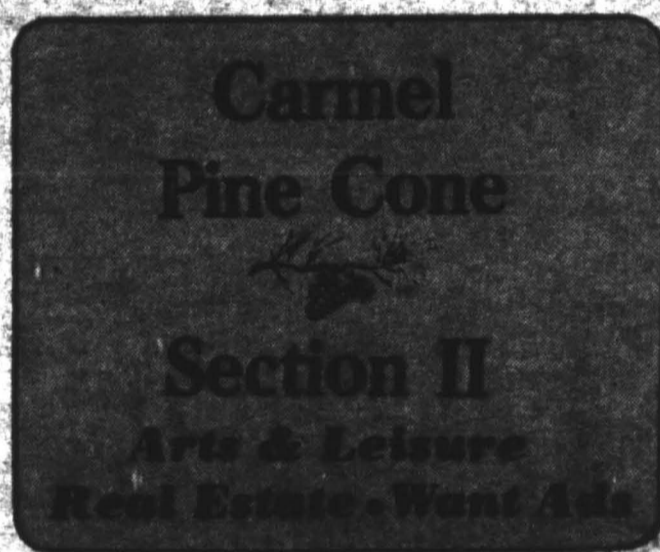

SUNNY REALE, left, entices Ray Hoffman, right, in the Rainbow Ensemble production of La Ronde. Composed of a series of 10 vignettes about seduction, the play was banned when it premiered around the turn of the century. The show opens at the Cherry Foundation in Carmel this weekend.

Explorama screens film on Britain

THE OLD AND THE new in England and Scotland are examined in a new feature-length color travel documentary movie, Britain Rediscovered. The film will be narrated in person by its producer, Thayer Soule, and is presented as part of the Explorama series Thursday and Friday, Feb. 16 and 17 in Sunset Center, Carmel.

Thayer Soule is a protege of the late Burton Holmes and first visited England in the late '30s. In the ensuing years, he traveled to Britain nearly every year and produced five films about Britain and her people.

Britain Rediscovered contrasts the familiar with the lesser-known regions in England and Scotland. Footage was shot on location in London, at Lands End, Inverness, the Cotswells, Stratford-Upon-Avon, Edinburgh, Balmoral Castle, Aberdeen, the Highland Games and Loch Lomond.

Reserved seat tickets are now on sale at all BASS outlets and the Mail Box, Eighth and San Carlos, Carmel, 625-5210. Or charge tickets by calling Explorama, (415) 771-4733.

Showtimes will be 8 p.m. Feb. 16 and 2 and 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 17 at Sunset Center Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Brahms' piano music is topic of lectures

'THE INCREDIBLE Solo Piano Music of Johannes Brahms' is the subject of four illustrated lectures to be given by pianist Dr. Alfred Kanwischer at Monterey Peninsula College.

The series is slated to take place from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Wednesdays beginning Feb. 22. Kanwischer will be assisted by his wife, Heidi, herself a piano artist of international stature.

Each session will outline a different aspect of the talents of the Viennese master, through the use of live performance, musical examples, commentary, readings, pictures and recordings. The course coincides with the 150th anniversary of Brahms' birth.

Alfred and Heidi Kanwischer have been featured in such music festivals as The Maverick Festival, Woodstock, N.Y.; The American Liszt Society, Boston, Mass.; the Darius Milhaud Celebration of 1980 and the Dartington Festival of the Arts, Devon, England.

In 1978, the Kanwischers received highest praise for their New York recital at Alice Tully Hall, Lincoln Center, which included Kanwischer's Movement for Two Pianos and Percussion.

Cost of the series, to be presented in the MPC Music Hall, is $16. Admission to individual presentations will be $5 at the door. Checks should be made payable to Monterey Peninsula College. Payment can be mailed to MPC Community Services, 980 Fremont Blvd., Monterey, 93940.

For additional information, call 646-4051.

Spend an evening with a British brass ensemble

MONTEREY PENINSULA College will present a concert by Great Britain's Fine Arts Brass Ensemble at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 18, in the MPC Theatre.

The quintet performs a broad repertoire, from baroque and renaissance suites to modern classics and jazz pieces. Members of the ensemble are Bryan Allen and Andy Culshaw on trumpet, Stephen Roberts on the French horn, Owen Slade on tuba and Simon Hogg on trombone.

The concert will open with a Stuart Masque, followed by the first movement of a double trumpet concerto by Vivaldi. Also included in the concert are a traditional spiritual, an arrangement of Bach's work and a Fats Waller selection.

The ensemble members derived influence from American and Canadian brass quintets rather than the more formal ensembles of their native Great Britain. The members' philosophy is to entertain through great variety and rigorous attention to presentation.

General admission to the concert is $4; student and senior admission is $3. Tickets may be purchased at the door or through the MPC Community Services Office, 646-4051.

BRITAIN REDISCOVERED contrasts the familiar with lesser-known regions in England and Scotland. The Explorama film will be narrated in person by its producer, Thayer Soule. Britain Rediscovered screens at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 16 and at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 17, in the Sunset Center Theatre, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

WINDFALLS, a work typical of the Helen Caswell style, will be among the paintings shown at her new show at Gallery Americana. A reception for the artist is slated for 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 18 at the gallery, Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel. Gallery Americana is open daily.

Latest works by Caswell to be exhibited at gallery

THE LATEST WORKS of Helen Caswell will be shown in her 11th one-woman show at Miner's Gallery Americana. The show opens with a reception for the artist from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 18.

Ms. Caswell's paintings are devoted to capturing the joy and wonder and childhood. The artist said of her work, "My first concern in painting is the recording of an instant when several lives may touch briefly, or when one soul is suspended in a private world. It is a moment that happens and then is gone. I look for the pattern of it, the movement and interaction of people with each other and with the environment. Especially I look for the uniqueness of each person, for I am primarily a portrait artist."

Ms. Caswell has accumulated many awards, not only for her internationally known paintings but for her illustrated books and poems as well.

Gallery Americana is on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel. For more information, call 624-5071.

Correction

A column that profiled the reception for the Emile Lahner Collection at the Marjorie Evans Gallery contained several errors of fact. The article by columnist Patty Morton-Davis ran in the Feb. 2 Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

As explained in a letter by Armgard Laky, the reception did not honor the opening of the Lahner exhibit, but in fact took place a few days before the closing of the show.

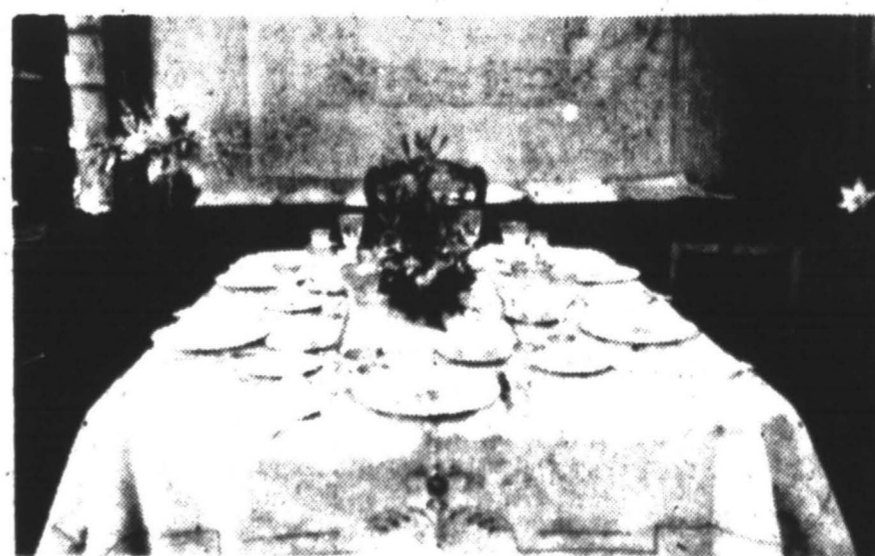

The works represented were from the collection of Les Laky, whose name was misspelled in the article.

Of the 45 works shown, there were five lithographs and nine oil pastels. The columnist stated "half of the exhibition was oil pastels," and there were "at least a dozen" lithographs.

The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook regrets these errors.

Reception Saturday

Blum's nature watercolors go on display at Zantman's

NATURE AND WILDLIFE watercolors by Roger Blum will be unveiled at an opening reception from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 18, at the Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. The gallery is on Sixth Avenue at Mission.

According to Blum, he grew up in a family that greatly respected both art and nature. His father is an avid hunter and fisherman, and Blum also hunts, fishes and traps. He studied taxidermy in order to better understand the anatomy and color of game.

The artist received early art inspiration when he viewed a Winslow Homer watercolor while in high school titled "Hunter in the Adirondacks."

Blum majored in art at Pacific Union College, Angwin, and studied watercolor with Vernon Nye, AWS.

While attending graduate school, he was recruited by Hallmark Cards on the strength of his watercolors of sporting themes. Blum was drafted into the army in 1965, and the following year was selected to be one of five combat artists to go to Vietnam and record the war zone.

In 1971, Blum moved to Massachusetts where he taught at Atlantic Union College. Eventually he returned to California where he became art department chairman at Pacific Union College.

Blum will be present at the Saturday reception for his work. For more information about the Blum exhibit, call 624-8314.

Multi-media exhibit opens Feb. 19

'WEEDS, SEEDS, BOXES and Bugs' is the title for the multi-media exhibit by Louisa Jenkins at Santa Catalina School in Monterey. The show is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, Feb. 19 through March 18.

The 85-year-old artist has delighted art lovers over the decades in the media of oils, watercolors and mosaic. Her present style of expression is in collage with acrylics, an evolutionary step toward scroll making. The scrolls represent a form of synthesis of Western and Eastern religion and philosophy.

Although she lived and studied painting in Paris, as a Californian she has maintained studios in San Francisco, Carmel, and on Partington Ridge in Big Sur.

The scrolls of Louisa Jenkins represent one human being's efforts to translate into visual form the unseen depths of cosmic experience, the spaces around which we weave the strands of ordinary life.

"The scroll is just to delight. Delight the deeps within, not take surface," said the octogenarian artist. "You can only see a scroll by sitting quietly, doing, asking nothing. Nothing gazing at nothing."

Ms. Jenkins is the daughter of a German composer who immigrated to America. She spent her early youth in Washington State and served as a surgical nurse during the first World War. Later she lived in Paris and studied painting under the noted Russian artist Gonchorova. For the next 20 years, as a Californian, she painted in oils and watercolors.

Ms. Jenkins attained renown as a mosaicist following her one-woman show at Gump's Gallery in San Francisco in 1950. During the next 18 years she undertook numerous commissions, including wall mosaics for Mount Angel Abbey near Portland, Ore.; Mt. LaSalle Novitiate Chapel in Napa; the college of Holy Names in Oakland; St. Ann's Chapel in Palo Alto; Vallombrosa Retreat House in Menlo Park and St. Teresa's Church in San Jose.

In recognition of her significant influence on liturgical art, St. Mary's College of Notre Dame in Indiana awarded her an honorary degree in 1957.

Variety of media on display at P.G. Art Center

QUILTS, PHOTOGRAPHS and assorted graphic arts comprise the latest show at the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave. The exhibit opens Friday, Feb. 17, and will remain on display through March 17.

"Quilt Art X 5" is the title bestowed on a fiber art presentation by Jeanie Anton, Wilda Northrop and Jeanne Mills of Pacific Grove, Peri Shefik of Monterey and Debi Tong Gray of Illinois. Their highly diverse works can be seen in the Main Gallery.

"Two by Two" features the photographs of Ted Orland, assistant art professor at the University of Oregon and J. Seeley, art professor at Wesleyan University.

Orland's offering is from two series: one made while travelling along the interstate freeway system; the second, a body of work entitled "Friends at Home." The latter is comprised of intimate portraits of the artist's friends in their own home environments. The interstate series explores the interplay between man-made and natural elements in the landscape. It conveys a high-key minimalist approach to tone and composition, further developed by use of muted hand-coloring in portions of the black and white images.

J. Seeley stretches his knowledge of art and photography techniques by producing highly graphic interpretations.

"These are all silkscreen prints except the small pieces which are offset lithographs," Seeley said. "They are all photographic images printed in ink on fine papers."

Humor, imagination and skill work together in a showing of artwork by Doug Russo of Santa Cruz. Graphics, paintings and lithographs produced over the past decade make up Russo's mini-retrospective.

Russo maintains a studio in Santa Cruz where he is also employed by the county parks department. His experimental approach to art allows him a broad spectrum of technical applications as well as innovative content. He describes his often humorous images as "... in many cases, rendered totally out of context to their normal state. Some paintings depict a play-on-words."

Russo studied at San Francisco Art Institute where he received his B.F.A., specializing in printmaking. His art career has included commercial advertising, animation, theatre design and wall murals.

Wearable and non-functional fibre works will be exhibited in Gallery 19. Carol Huntington, guest curator, has chosen a wide array of fibre works executed by four women. Huntington and her partner Melinda Lindley collaborated on wall pieces inspired by old quilt designs in their felted wall selections, while other woven wire hangings are reminiscent of old coverlets.

Kathy Springfield will show more practical but equally imaginative vests and jackets constructed of polished cotton and embellished with paint and embroidery similar to seminole designing.

Catherine McConnell incorporates paintings in the trapunto technique.

For additional information about the new show at the Pacific Grove Art Center, call 375-2208.

On stage

Neil Simon's comedy hit, Plaza Suite, continues Thursdays through Sundays at Carmel's Studio Theatre.

Originally performed on Broadway, Plaza Suite is actually a triptych of plays, which together compose an evening of comedy.

The first play introduces a suburban couple, played by Dick Vreeland and Alison Faul, who take a suite at the Plaza in New York while their house is being painted. It turns out to be the same suite they honeymooned in years before.

The second tale depicts a top-draw Hollywood producer in search of excitement. He calls up his childhood sweetheart, but in the intervening years this suburban housewife turns out to be more than he bargained for. The couple is portrayed by Richard and Elizabeth Barratt.

The final act focuses on the same suite where a mother and father do battle waiting for their daughter to "come out of that bathroom and get married!" This portion features the talents of Dick Vreeland, Alison Faul and Randi L. Harmon.

Plaza Suite continues Thursdays through Sundays until March 3. Reservations can be made by calling 624-1661. Price of dinner and show is $22.50. A limited number of show only seats are available at $10. The Studio Theatre is located on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel.

A series of 10 vignettes that detail seduction, La Ronde will be presented by the Rainbow Ensemble for the Performing Arts for a limited engagement at the Cherry Foundation Theater.

Startling in its honesty about human relations when first staged around the turn of the century, the play retains much of its original relevance and charm as directed by Greg Fritsch and David Zarko. The cast includes Santa Cruz-based actors Armon Stover, Ray Hoffman, John Flynn, Sunny Reale, Joan Bechtel and Laura Long.

Produced by the Santa Cruz Rainbow Ensemble for the Performing Arts, the play is on tour to Carmel following a very successful run in Santa Cruz and a two-week engagement at the Valencia Rose Theater in San Francisco. La Ronde is the first show in a planned continuing exchange of performing arts programs between the Rainbow Ensemble and Carmel theaters.

La Ronde plays Friday and Saturday, Feb. 17 and 18, and Friday through Sunday, Feb. 24-26. The Cherry Foundation Theater is on Guadalupe at Fourth, Carmel. Tickets are $6 general and $5 for students and seniors, available at the door. This project is supported in part by a grant from the Cultural Council of Santa Cruz County.

For more information, call the Cherry Foundation, 624-7491.

The forces of evil square off weekly with the forces of good at the Wharf Theater in Monterey.

The play is Dracula, Bram Stoker's occult thriller, adapted for the stage by Hamilton Deane and John Balderston. The drama provides a battlefield for the extrahuman forces of pure good and pure evil, represented by Professor Abraham Van Helsing and Count Voivode Dracula, respectively.

Dracula, directed by Larry Welch, will play at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and at 8 p.m. Sundays. The show runs until Feb. 26.

Ticket prices are $6 and $8. For reservation information, call 372-2882.

The Monterey Peninsula College Drama Department stages the comedy/drama Mass Appeal in the new theatre at York School.

Directed by Nick Zanides, this production portrays the funny and poignant conflict between an establishment parish priest and the untamed ideals of a young Catholic seminarian.

Henry Littlefield plays the part of Father Tim Farley, who has his comfortable daily routine upset by the challenges of seminarian Mark Dolson, portrayed by Steve Moorers.

Of Mass Appeal, theater critic John Simon wrote, "It has an inexhaustible supply of humor-leavened moral purpose..."

The play was critically acclaimed during its recent run in New York City and San Francisco.

Performances will take place Friday and Saturday nights. General admission is $3.50 and a 50 cent discount is offered to groups of 20 or more. For reservations, call 372-2475.

Domestic woes

ALISON FAUL and Dick Vreeland, as parents of a bride who locked herself in the bathroom, attempt to comfort each other in the Studio Theatre staging of Plaza Suite. The Neil Simon comedy has been extended to play Thursdays through Sundays until March 10. The Studio Theatre is on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel. For tickets, call 624-1661.

James Bond scores in Monterey

A 007 double-feature comes to the Morse Auditorium of the Monterey Institute of International Studies Friday and Saturday, Feb. 17, 18.

From Russia with Love, is a 1963 thriller in which James Bond is lured into a trap by a beautiful Russian spy. It is the personal favorite of its star, Sean Connery. Also showing is the 1964 release, Goldfinger, which features Harold Sakata as Odd Job and Honor Blackman as Pussy Galore.

On Wednesday, Feb. 22, the Monterey Peninsula Film Society will screen The Graduate starring Dustin Hoffman.

All films begin at 8:15 p.m. The theater is on 440 Van Buren, Monterey. Tickets are $3.50 general; $2.75 students, seniors and military and $2 for members of the Monterey Peninsula Film Society. For more information, call 659-4795.

Movie profiles ultra-marathons

The Inner Runner, a half-hour documentary which shows what runners experience during a 24-hour ultra-marathon, will be screened at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 21-22.

World-class runner Arpan De Angelo will discuss running, meditation and the philosophy of self-transcendence after the movie.

The free program is sponsored by the Sri Chinmoy Centres of California. The film will be shown Tuesday at Sunset Center in Carmel and on Wednesday at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center, Lighthouse and Dickman.

What's playing at the movies

Blame It on Rio: When best friends Matthew Hollis (Michael Caine) and Victor Lyons (Joseph Bologna) take their teenage daughters on a fun-filled trip to Rio De Janeiro, Victor's suddenly grown-up daughter develops more than a schoolgirl crush on Matthew. A series of embarrassing and hilarious complications ensue as Matthew, Victor, their daughters and Matthew's wife become engaged in a madcap romp that leads to some startling truths about themselves and their relationships to each other. Rated R. At the Cinema 70. 373-4777.

Broadway Danny Rose: Woody Allen offers one of his most humane character studies — the lovable schlemiel of a talent agent with the most unpromotable acts (a one-legged tap dancer, a balloon-twisting couple). One of his acts, the over-the-hill lounge singer Lou Canova (Nick Apollo Forte) was catching on in the nostalgia craze of the late '60s. Unfortunately, Lou's girlfriend (Mia Farrow) was married to a mafia hit man, and before long a couple of hit men are after Danny. Rated PG. At the Crossroads Cinema. 624-2792.

Never Cry Wolf: Director Carroll Ballard has created an amazing amount of humor, suspense and adventure in his version of Farley Mowat's wonderful book about a naive young biologist, a pack of wolves in the Arctic and how each adjust to the other. Hiro Narita's cinematography is magical. The film has dignity, poignancy and power. Rated PG. At the Golden Bough. 624-4044.

1990 . . . The Bronx Warriors: The late Vic Morrow appears in this violent tale of city gang mayhem. "The first to die were the lucky ones." Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Pink Flamingos: 300-lb. transvestite Divine stars in this, the first of John Waters' feature-length films. In an effort to be recognized as the filthiest people alive, Divine and company work to outdo themselves. They reside in a tacky mobile home surrounded by pink flamingos, and in the famous conclusion of this cult classic, Divine ingests poodle feces. Rated R. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Cross Creek: The compelling portrait of a woman who, living at the edge of survival, found a world of meaning. A Martin Ritt production, starring Mary Steenbruggen and Rip Torn. Kathleen Carroll of the New York Daily News calls the film "beguiling . . . the acting is exceptionally good." At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Footloose: Lori Singer of Fame fame plays a Chicago high school student who transfers to a rural high school and finds that music and manners are different than in the city. With Kevin Bacon and John Lithgow. Directed by Herbert Ross (The Turning Point). Rated PG. At the Regency Theatre. 375-6696.

Hot Dog: There is more to do in the snow than ski. Or so says the publicity release. This skiing film focuses on the sport of "hotdogging," or wildly reckless downhill ski stunts. Filmed in Squaw Valley. Stars David Naughton, formerly of Dr. Pepper commercials and werewolf roles, and Shannon Tweed. Rated R. At the Regency Theatre. 375-6696.

Lassiter: Tom Selleck stars in the title role as a man the police and FBI call on to solve a dangerous case. With Jane Seymour and Lauren Hutton. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Local Hero: winner of the best screenplay awards from the New York Film Critics and the National Society of Film Critics, this drama stars Peter Riegert, Denis Lawson, Fulton Mackay and Burt Lancaster. It was made by the producer of Chariots of Fire. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Reckless: Story of the passion and conflicts of teenage lovers, in the Wild One or Rebel Without a Cause vein. Aidan Quinn and Daryl Hannah are the new sufferers. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

The Right Stuff: A chronicle of the first American exploits in outer space. The film progresses from Chuck Yeager (Sam Shepard), the legendary test pilot who first broke the sound barrier in 1947 and concludes in 1963 with the last of the Mercury Astronaut launches. From the Tom Wolfe best seller. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: In this cult classic, an engaged couple, Brad and Janet, meet Dr. Frankfurter, a transvestite/transsexual, and learn to Time Warp. Guaranteed to relieve the cause, but not the symptom. Stars Tim Curry, Susan Sarandon, Barry Bostwick, Little Nell and Patricia Quinn. Richard O'Brien wrote the music and portrays the hunchback assistant. Rated R. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Silkwood: Meryl Streep's first role since her Academy Award-winning performance in Sophie's Choice. Streep portrays Karen Silkwood, who died in 1974 in a mysterious car crash while she was attempting to expose the dangers in the plutonium plant where she worked. Co-stars Kurt Russell and Cher. Directed by Mike Nichols, from an original screenplay by Nora Ephron and Alice Arlen. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre. 375-2800.

The Smurfs and the Magic Flute: It's the Smurf's one and only full-length motion picture . . . ever! Need we say more? Rated G. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Star 80: Bob Fosse directed this story of Dorothy Stratten, 1980 Playmate of the Year, who was murdered at age 20 by her estranged husband after she moved in with a famous Hollywood director. There's a virtuoso performance by Eric Roberts as the sleazy husband with big ambitions. Mariel Hemingway is moving as the former Dairy Queen waitress who has more loyalty than ambition. Rated R. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Terms of Endearment: is a comedy with dramatic cadences that explores the complex, honest and joyous evolution of the relationship between a mother and daughter over the course of 30 years. Debra Winger is Emma Greenway Horton, Shirley MacLaine is Aurora Greenway, Jack Nicholson is the Greenways' next-door neighbor, former American astronaut Garrett Breedlove, Danny DeVito is Aurora's longtime suitor, Jeff Daniels is the man Emma decides to marry and John Lithgow befriends Emma. Rated PG. At the Crossroads Cinema. 624-2792.

Unfaithfully Yours: Remake of Preston Sturges' comedy starring Dudley Moore as a conductor who is jealous of his wife (Nastassia Kinski) and a violinist (Armand Assante). Howard Zieff directed. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema. 624-5111.

Yentl: Barbra Streisand co-wrote, produced and directed this star vehicle. Based on a story by Isaac Bashevis Singer, Streisand portrays a young Jewish woman who disguises herself as a man in order to attend studies forbidden to women in 1804. Mandy Patinkin plays Avigdor, the young man she secretly loves, and Amy Irving is the woman Yentl "marries" in order to remain close to Avigdor. Rated PG. At the Carmel Village Theatre. 624-5341.

Film review

'Star 80:' a boring soap opera saga

By MICHAEL GARDNER

Star 80. With Mariel Hemingway, Eric Roberts and Cliff Robertson. Directed by Bob Fosse. A Ladd Company release. Rated R for nudity and profanity.

DIRECTOR BOB Fosse thrives on showbiz themes for his movies and always seems to come out a winner with the likes of Cabaret, Lenny and All That Jazz.

But this time around Fosse's recanting of the horrible murder of a Playboy "Playmate" comes across as a boring soap opera saga that is filled with stereotypical characters and devoid of any real suspense.

Star 80 attempts to unravel the story of the ex-Dairy Queen waitress Dorothy Stratten who rose to stardom as a Playboy centerfold only to be later murdered by her jealous estranged husband Paul Snider, who then turned the gun on himself.

This tragic story is the stuff of which good films are made, and it's true to boot. There is the success story of Dorothy, a jealous greaser husband who produces wet T-shirt contests, and thrown in for good measure are the questionable motives and ethics of Hefner's Playboy empire.

To his credit, Fosse does attempt to tackle the hard issues that surround this case, such as why Stratten fell for Snider, how she was exploited by the Playboy magnates, and how loser husband Paul was unable to gain acceptance to the Hollywood world he wanted so desperately to be a part of.

But Fosse comes up short because he tries to compress too many angles into the two hours. And his characters are too stereotyped, which gives the audience little to hate, love, or feel sorry for. That is important in a movie such as this. The audience must be allowed to feel some kind of emotion toward the characters.

Through flashbacks and after-the-murder interviews with their friends and associates, Fosse tries to focus on those three perspectives: Dorothy, Paul and Hefner.

But because of the hodge-podge of interviews and inability to keep one perspective, Star 80 loses its focal point and becomes too diluted.

Instead of so many interviews and flashbacks of the murder scene, Fosse would have spent some of that time better by developing Dorothy's character more and trying to understand her life, feelings and emotions about what happened to her as she was swept up in the frantic world of interviews, shooting sessions and grade-B movies.

MARIEL HEMINGWAY as Dorothy is an absolute beauty. She has that innocent and wholesome "Playboy look," sort of like the girl next door. Hemingway is left with little more than one-liners and is not allowed to develop any part of the real Dorothy Stratten.

The dialogue is shallow. As Dorothy tries to break up with

Paul over the telephone she keeps saying she wants her freedom. Yet nowhere in the previous hour or so in the film did she begin to show signs of independence from him. There are no clues to her maturity or growth.

Eric Roberts plays Snider, a greasy man with the personality of a leach and the clothing taste of a pimp. Snider calls Hefner "Hef," practices introductions in front of the mirror, makes love to other women and stages peep shows such as wet T-shirt and wet-underwear contests.

Snider is the epitome of a born loser. He dresses wrong, talks wrong and rubs people the wrong way at first introduction. He tries to impress, yet instead is ridiculed.

Actor Roberts' performance is unengaging. He is the picture of all your stereotypes and nothing more. You can't hate him or feel sorry for him because although the characterization is technically correct, there is no heart, no soul. Roberts acts rather than lives the role. He seems to be a mere cardboard character who recites lines to a camera and not to the audience.

Cliff Robertson is Hugh Hefner, god of the skin-flicks who makes Dorothy a star. But again, the performance is too stereotyped. He kisses every girl he meets, always walks around in pajamas and holds a pipe and bottled soda. There is nothing to the character for the audience. We might as well be looking at the pages of one of his press releases.

This is Fosse's weakness in the film. There is no soul, no passion, no depth. He tantalizes the audience with promises, yet fails to deliver. The characters and the story fail to get beyond the one-dimensional.

Fosse also has a major obstacle to overcome with Star 80 — the audience knows what is going to happen. The murder was reported world-wide, was the topic of extensive journalistic accounts in magazines and was the theme of a television movie (Death of a Centerfold).

But the makers of the still-in-release Silkwood also had a similar drawback and the film is exciting, filled with tension and has superb acting performances — all three ingredients that are missing in Star 80.

That is why I simply cannot recommend Star 80. Instead, wait for it to come out on one of the cable stations and you won't feel cheated for having spent $5 on admission.

Book beat*'Jacuzzi novel' of the 1980s

By ANATOLE BROYARD

N.T. Times News Service

Friends of the Opposite Sex. By Sara Davidson. 288 pages. Doubleday. $15.95.

'AS WAS true with many of her contemporaries, Lucy gained from her work the fulfillment and continuity which her personal life could not supply."

This sentence captures pretty well the tone of Sara Davidson's Friends of the Opposite Sex. Lucy takes herself very seriously as a heroine of her time and place. Loose Change, Miss Davidson's first book, was about the 1960s. Real Property, her second book, moved on to the '70s, and now, in her first novel, she proposes to "express" the 80s.

"I meet hundreds of men," Lucy says. "We drink wine, we exchange personal stories, go in the Jacuzzi and go to bed and maybe it lasts a week or two and then someone calls in sick." Lucy is so very soaked in herself and her problems that one is tempted to call this a Jacuzzi novel.

She can't be accused of not trying. "In the early 70s," we read, "she had been drawn to the Eastern religions, with their promised jewel of inner peace, transcendence over the temporal and union with the divine."

Lucy even went to India to study with Shree Ganesh. "There were gardens with exotic flowers. Ganesh would give his talks, and everyone was dressed in orange, meditating, working to develop attitudes of joy."

Now, at 33, Lucy has reached what might be called a "passage." She yearns for permanence and children. The films she makes for television are not "fulfillment" enough. When she meets Joe, another film maker, she wants him to occupy her Jacuzzi forever. Joe, we learn, can make love uninterrupted for four hours.

Lucy sees him as "the twin soul." Her summing up of Joe is a fair index of her values: "They were both night creatures. They loved the outdoors, and were interested in development of the spirit. They liked the same books, movies and rock songs. They liked to get stoned. They both drank diet Dr. Pepper. The major difference Lucy could see was that Joe disliked birds and she liked birds all right but hated dogs."

JOE SAYS: "I'd like to get myself in shape to where I could have a relationship." First, however, he has to "figure some things out." Lucy resents his suggestion that they "just leave things loose." She and Ms. Davidson are no longer interested in the loose-change life.

"I want to sit in bed," Lucy says, "and watch movies on television. I want to do errands together, take plane rides together, be bored, be angry and stewing, have dinner, take out the garbage. I want my nose rubbed in the ordinariness of being a couple." To paraphrase the old adage, the Jacuzzi is always warmer on the other side of the street. Lucy is ready to "surrender to the duad."

Failing that, she makes a pilgrimage to Israel to re-examine her roots and get them on film. From India to California to Israel is a natural progression for Lucy. In Jerusalem, she'd "felt she was breathing new air. She wanted to learn as much as she could.

"In the cafes, she studied the dark, expressive faces." One of these dark, expressive faces belongs to Uzi, one of Lucy's lovers from her student days. He is now fat, married, a father and a professor of Bedouin anthropology.

Uzi shows Lucy around the Sinai. In a rather improbable bit of symbolism, Lucy picks up an unexploded mortar shell. Even the integrated life, Ms. Davidson implies, could blow up in your face. And, sure enough, Uzi's plane crashes in the desert. He is killed and Lucy, together with Joe, who has come over to find his roots, too, undergoes the ordeal of survival — another metaphor.

She and Joe are washed clean, in true Biblical fashion, by a flood. Lucy finds "such beauty in the rhythms" of a Bedouin camp. "Bedouin women," she tells Joe, "were subservient, yes, but there was something appealing in the restrictions they accepted. Born into nature, a closed system, they seem to attain, within its confines, a cheerfulness, fulfillment and courage."

Friends of the Opposite Sex is not without a certain narrative appeal. It has a comfortable vulgarity, like old movies on television, and occasional, inadvertent comedy.

The ending of the book is odd, merely sketched in, as if the author had no faith in her own conclusions. Her plot owes more to her determination to find "fulfillment" for Lucy than to any real development of her character.

While Ms. Davidson is a capable reporter of the vicissitudes of single life in Venice, Calif., that scene has already become a cliché. In fact, it may be Ms. Davidson's fate as a writer to put the finishing touches to the clichés of her time.

Music corner*I Solisti is alive and well

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

IT MAY TAKE years before we learn the current status of once-famous artists who haven't been heard from for a long time. I Solisti di Zagreb are such artists. Their name still commands international respect and admiration. But they haven't toured our area in countless seasons, nor have they made records as they did long ago.

To the delight of the Carmel Music Society audience last weekend at Sunset Center, I Solisti di Zagreb proved to be alive and extremely well. Sporting a richly varied program of 18th, 19th and 20th Century music — some familiar, some completely unfamiliar — the Solisti, a totally different family from Antonio Janigro's original group, glowed with world-class suavity of tone and ensemble.

During the last 30 years, the world's principal exponents of music calling for 12 to 15 players have been I Solisti di Zagreb, I Musici, the Jean-Francois Paillard orchestra, and the Acedemy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. All have recorded prolifically — St. Martin's the most — and for a full generation have spread the word on baroque music.

But times have changed. The personnel of these chamber orchestras is different; Paillard is the only original music director still in charge. And in recent years other organizations have moved into prominence. Nicolas Harnoncourt in Vienna, Gustav Leonhardt and Frans Bruggen in Holland, and the late David Munrow in London have all brought later and more accurate scholarship to bear on the performance of baroque music. Munrow boldly plunged into the distant past and shed new light on centuries of music rarely recorded and almost never heard.

IN THE FACE of all this activity, groups like I Solisti di Zagreb, and the others of their generation, must be viewed in ever-changing contexts. One can genuinely wonder if the older groups are still viable. Happily the Zagreb (and the Paillard, heard earlier this season) are, even if neither group shows particular interest in the recent scholarship discoveries that obsess Malgoire, Hogwood and Pinnock.

Tonko Ninic and the Zagreb soloists exude, instead, a burnished complexity of sound and style, which suggests that a fine Stradivarius, like a fine bottle of wine, deserves every opportunity to indulge its special radiance. What the latest scholarship can teach is vital to our growing awareness of what's happening out there. A Strad, modified in the 19th Century way (as most of them are) can still show us what's happening inside...right in here.

The Friday night celebration began with a Solisti de Zagreb trademark, Sarabande, Gigue and Badinerie by Corelli, a "suite" of randomly chosen sonata movements, played and recorded by the original Zagreb orchestra in arrangements by the Spanish violinist Fernandez Arbos. The winsome character and easy grace that began the evening never left.

None of the abundance of ornamentation found in the newest realizations of baroque music pestered the Handel Concerto Grosso in B Minor, Op. 6, No. 12. Trills were few and far between, and were missing even from some of the cadential V chords, and the edges of articulation in the opening largo were soft. It was essentially a "high-polish" instead of "baroque-practice" situation, and the character and nobility of the music were set forth in romantic flush. The Aria, the concerto's most celebrated movement, showed its variations in elegance and dignity.

With only 12 strings, what remained of the program covered an extraordinary palette of colors. From 1877, when the composer was only 23, came Janacek's Suite for Strings. Here was an opportunity to examine the talent of a youth who would not show his true fires until his mid-50s and who would draw on the bounty of Dvorak and Smetana.

Janacek embers — if not the blaze — came through, and the reading argued its case surpassingly. A bracing presto was followed by a cello-dominated recitative/adagio.

Fran Lhotka, a Czech/Yugoslavian, used Slavonian rhythms in his Scherzo, a modernistic movement on folk ideas. The Introduction and Allegro rustico for contrabass and strings by Boris Papandopulo, a Yugoslav said to have some Stravinsky blood, made considerable use of pyrotechnics for the solo instrument and did not spare the orchestra a handful of exotic effects.

The work came out sounding like Kodaly in its finer moments and the virtuosity demanded of the solo instrument never let up. Soloist Mario Ivelja handled his part, replete with cadenzas, with fair nonchalance, and took his bows about as well. The piece was a tour de force for the solo instrument, more than for instruments in general. Its Macedonian finale made of soloist Ivelja a dancer more than a singer.

Benjamin Britten's Simple Symphony, another trademark of the orchestra, showed the elan of the Solisti no less than the remarkable resourcefulness of the composer. The work arrests attention over and over in every movement. The Playful Pizzicato bears comparison with the pizzicato movement in Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4, and in many aspects accounts for a much broader and more international perspective.

The Shostakovich Scherzo, Op. 11, a youthful tune full of sound and fury, shows the composer in the thralls of Prokofievian independence. Its close-on harmonies bite the ear, and its motoric rhythms bite the feet, but, between bites, it exites the remaining senses with lusty exuberance. At least that's how the Solisti played it.

Backgammon

The right blot

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 5-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

The only decent five on the board is from your midpoint to your 8-point. Make that move mentally and think of a good two.

You could continue on with the same man to your 6-point, but piling men up on a single point when you have other moves available is a sure way to lose. The other available moves are from your midpoint to your 11-point, from Black's 1-point to his 3-point, and from your 6-point to your 4-point.

Nothing good can be said for moving a second man from your midpoint. There's no need to give this point up so early.

The split from Black's 1-point is extremely dangerous. Black can hit the blot on his 3-point with almost any roll. And if he makes the 3-point (with 6-5, 6-3, 5-3, 5-5 or 3-3) he will double, and you would be wise to resign.

What's left is the move from your 6-point to your 4-point. The odds are almost 2 to 1 that Black will not hit the blot; and better than 2 to 1 that you will make your 4-point or 3-point if Black doesn't hit your blot. In other words, you stand to gain a worthwhile point at little risk.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

"French - with a difference"

After dining at Le Cochon Laqué, Monsieur C— P— of Marseilles, France, wrote this in our guest book:

"Bon, excellent, magnifique, sublime, formidable, parfait."

English translation: "Wow!"

This tribute from a Frenchman is a significant testimonial to the artistry of Owner-Chef An Nguyen. For Le Cochon Laqué she has created a unique menu derived from her training in classic French cuisine and modified by the Oriental techniques and subtleties of her native Vietnam. The result of this blend of West and East is a distinctive cuisine - light, delicate, and marvelously flavorful.

Dinners range from $10.95 to $18.95, and include both soup and salad. Each delicious entree is served with a sauce of Chef An's own creation. A great favorite is Roast Duck, a specialty of the house. Other entrees are Filet Mignon Flambe, Rack of Lamb, Lobster Tail, Scallops, Chicken Curry, and Fresh Salmon Steak (in season).

P.S. For a really scrumptious dessert, try our Raspberry Souffle, prepared to order!

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Monterey and Pacific Grove churches generally held Roosevelt memorial services last Sunday. In Carmel on Friday and Monday the great man was remembered in the public school.

The Prince family, who for several months have been away, is expected home shortly. Their relatives and friends will welcome them with open arms.

Manager Edwards of the telephone company has a force of men at work at and about the new lodge at Pebble Beach. An elaborate system is being installed, including a telephone in every apartment.

The 10 days' drive for clothes for the Belgians closes on the 20th. Those who have clothing to give should get it into Mrs. Canine's hands as quickly as possible. This will probably be the last request for clothing.

STELLMAN RECEIVES UNDISCLOSED AMOUNT IN CITY DAMAGE SUIT

A compromise settlement for an undisclosed amount was accepted last night by William K. Stewart, attorney for Louis Stellman in a $100,000 damage suit against the city of Carmel. Stellman was suing the city over the death of his wife in an automobile accident last year near the intersection of Guadalupe Street and Second Avenue.

"It was a nice settlement. I am delighted and so is Mr. Stellman," Stewart told the Pine Cone this morning.

"Neither Mr. Stellman nor I wish to destroy the woodsy character of Carmel," he added, "but maintain trees and road dips should be marked."

In obtaining the compromise judgment against the city, Stewart contended Mr. Stellman hit an unmarked dip, lost control of his car, and hit a tree. Mrs. Stellman died as a result of the accident.

ARMY ANNOUNCES DLI BRANCH TRANSFER

The Department of the Army last week announced the movement of the headquarters and East Coast branch of the Defense Language Institute to the Presidio of Monterey.

The same announcement also indicated that Fort Ord would receive a change in mission. During the next several years, Fort Ord along with Fort Polk, La., will gradually convert from their training mission to homes for brigade-sized combat units.

The precise numbers involved are not yet known, but the Department of the Army has indicated that the missions will change gradually with no significant reduction in employment.

CARMEL SCHOOLS TO LAY OFF TEACHERS, SLASH PROGRAMS TO MEET BUDGET

Carmel School district trustees will meet in special session next Tuesday to consider firing as many as 17 teachers and cutting back course offerings in the district to balance the budget next year.

Superintendent Carl Wilsey said Tuesday night staff layoffs are the only way to wipe out a projected $585,000 budget deficit. The only other recourse would be eliminating district school buses or charging parents a transportation fee.

Trustees are not expected to approve specific cuts when they meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Carmel Middle School library. But, under state law, they have only 28 days — until March 15 — to notify any teachers who will be laid off next fall.

Wilsey told trustees that normal attrition — retirements and sabbatical leaves — probably will reduce the teaching staff by nine to 13 positions. The balance of the cuts would have to be made up by firing "a limited number of people," he said.

Film tackles American music

What is American Music? is the topic of a movie that will be shown at 1 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 16, by the Brown Bag Cinema. Aaron Copeland shares the podium with Leonard Bernstein at the New York Philharmonic in this exploration of the distinctive characteristics of American music.

Bring a bag lunch and join the viewers at Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Sunset Center provides the coffee. Lunch is enjoyed on the terrace outside the Chapman Room on fine days or in the Chapman Room if weather is inclement. The film is shown at 1 p.m. at Carpenter Hall. Admission is free.

Summer study in Spain offered

Scrappy JV Padres win league title

Comebacks mark fantastic year

COACH BOB Swartz calls his junior varsity basketball team a group of kids who have the most "character" of any squad he ever has guided over his 15-year coaching career.

The Mission Trail Athletic League Carmel High School Padre junior varsity basketball team, which consists of sophomores and juniors, was 20-3 overall and 12-1 going into the final game of the season Feb. 14. (Results were unavailable by deadline.)

"It's the best over-all record that anyone around here can remember for a long time," Swartz said going into Tuesday night's action.

The championship season for the 1983-84 edition of the JV Padres was highlighted by scrappy play, a trio of miraculous comebacks, and a scoring outburst to whip King City 93-50, Coach Swartz said.

The strong play of the JV squad should be good news to varsity coach Joe Feldeisen, whose team is in the playoffs.

"I think he'll have plenty of varsity

material for a few years to come, Swartz said.

Swartz cited four players who were the most consistent and valuable in the squad's march to the league championship, which it clinched Feb. 7 with a win over Gonzales.

Leading scorer on the team is sophomore wingman (guard-forward) Sean Jones, who averages about 16 points per game. "We go to him when we need a basket," Swartz said.

The big man in the center position is 6-foot-4 sophomore Doug Stevenson, who is the team's leading rebounder and "has shown improvement throughout the year," the coach said.

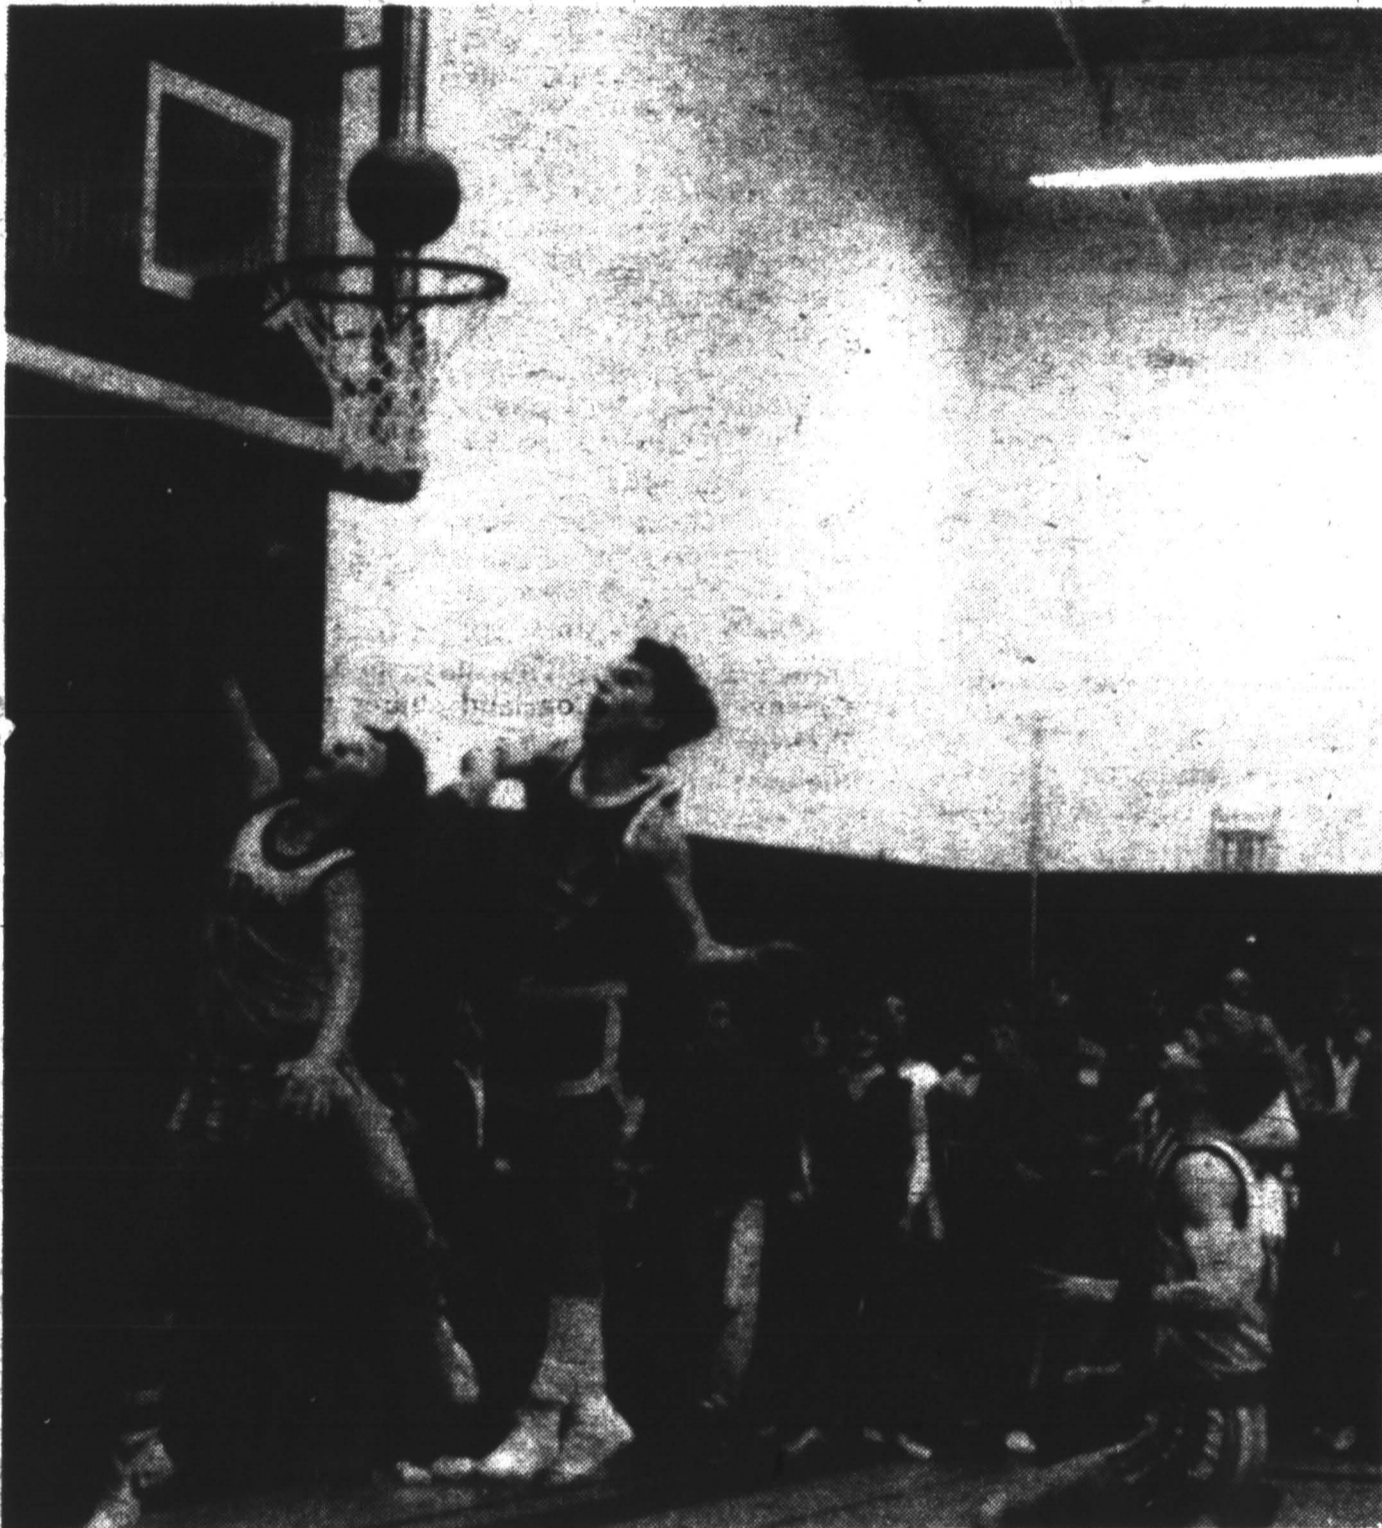

Junior guard Doug Thomas is the team ballhandling floor general, the coach said.

And junior forward Berndt Stolfi "kept the team in ball games with his thinking," Swartz added.

Swartz said highlights of the season included three comeback wins. The biggest was when the JV Padres rallied from five points down with 1:01 left to go to defeat Palma by three. Palma was the only MTAL team to beat the JV Padres.

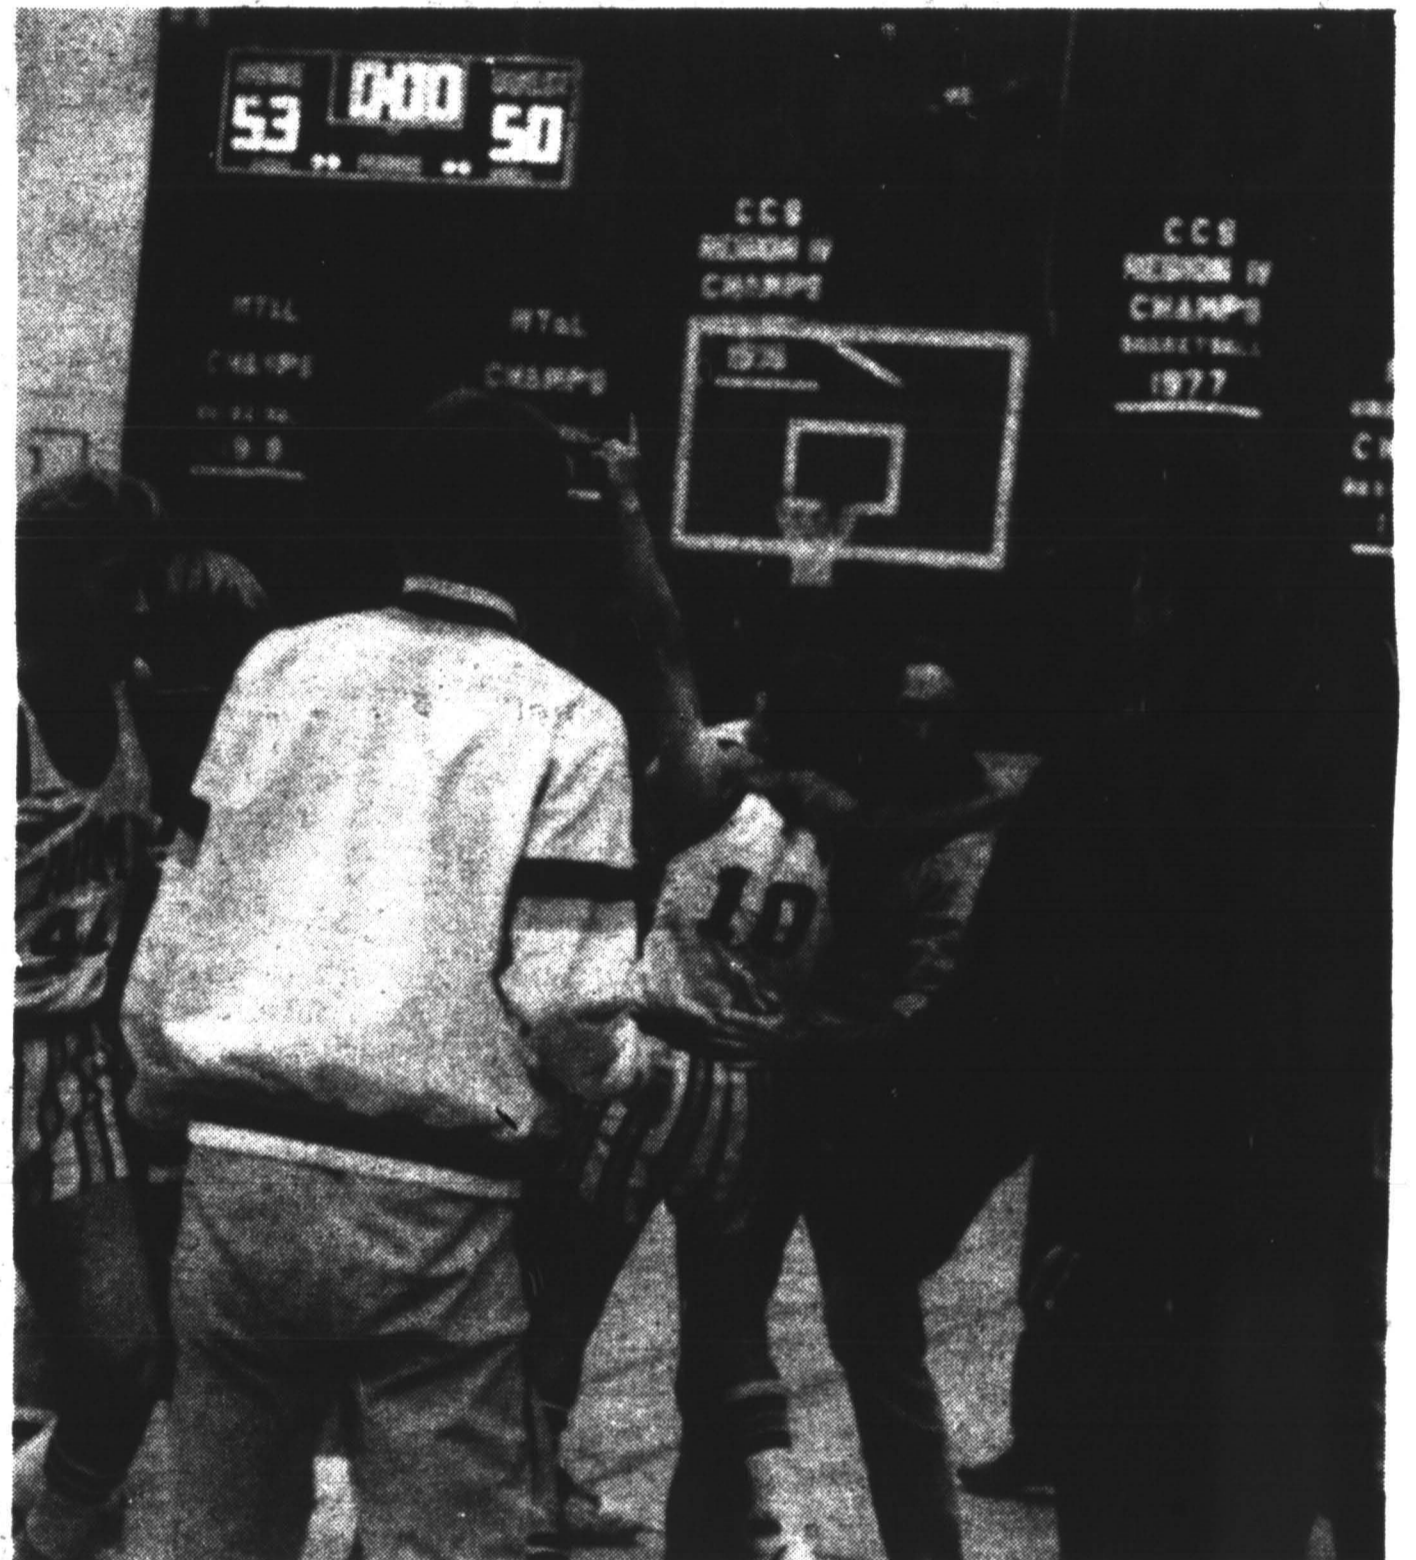

Another comeback came in a contest against Gonzales when Carmel rallied from an 11-point deficit with 2:30 to go to tie the game and then won it in overtime.

The Padres also came back from a nine point deficit to beat North Salinas in the final four minutes of play. The Vikings had beaten the Padres twice in non-league play.

DOUG THOMAS connected on a very important layup during a JV Padre miraculous comeback win over Palma, which had earlier in the season handed Carmel its only league defeat. The Padres were behind by five points with a minute to play, but rallied for a 53-50 win Jan. 31.

THERE WAS joy in Padre gym Jan. 31 after the JV Padre basketball team stunned Palma with a comeback win. Above, Chip Aronson

(10) gave head coach Bob Swartz a victory hug just after the final second ticked off the clock.

Next to The Dynasty

NANCY BURNETT (far left), who often talks to Tularcitos School students about the Carmel Valley and its special ecology, was on hand to share a laugh during another part of a Feb. 8 school science program that brought parents and fifth grade students together to learn about light and optics.

PARENT MARLI Melton, who helped organize a special light and optics program at Tularcitos School Feb. 8, participated in an experiment with student Suzanne Baker (with sunglasses) while Angie Rutherford watched. (Michael Gardner photos.)

Parents pitch in to make science more exciting at Tularcitos School

For a group of Tularcitos School parents, involvement means far more than cookie sales or obligatory attendance at the annual back-to-school night.

"Teachers have so much to do and there isn't a whole lot of staff and materials anymore to do special projects," says Marli Melton.

With that philosophy in mind, Mrs. Melton and several volunteer parents have taken it upon themselves to develop a supplement to the school science curriculum at the elementary school in Carmel Valley.

Earlier in the school year Nancy Burnett organized — with the help of other parents — a study of the Carmel River and its environmental significance to the Valley.

The first and fourth grade students wrote reports and took several parent-led field trips to the river.

Then it was Mrs. Melton's turn to take over.

Mrs. Melton with the assistance of Mrs. Burnett developed a program on optics which included a visit to the school by Carmel Valley optometrist Kim Hartford.

The parents then established a special science area in room 20 where the fifth grade students can come and work with the experiments.

Some of those experiments include demonstrations on how lenses can bend light, and the effects of different colored lenses on light, such as mixing red and green filters to create yellow light.

Each Tuesday and Wednesday a handful of parent volunteers stays in Room 20 to help the students with the experiments. Later Mrs. Melton hopes to adapt the difficulty level of the experiments to the lower grades so that the younger students can participate in the program.

A former college-level math teacher, Mrs. Melton helped develop the program with the assistance of the San Francisco Exploratorium at the Palace of Fine Arts. Exploratorium officials sent Mrs. Melton information on what they call mini-courses. The courses are "light and optics" and "the eye and vision."

With this material and other information gleaned from the school library, Mrs. Melton and the other parents put together the supplemental science program expected to continue through March.

Mrs. Melton said she volunteers her time because financial cutbacks have made it virtually impossible for teachers alone to offer a number of supplemental science programs.

"Science is expensive and it takes a lot of time. It's time and money that most teachers just don't have," Mrs. Melton said.

"I really like science and like to help. I do believe that a good public education system is fundamental to a democratic society," she added. "I think it deserves our best effort."

Mrs. Melton said many parents help at the school.

"That's one of the nice things about Carmel Valley and the other schools in our district. There is a real sense of community here," she said. "These are just people who want to see something good happen in the schools."

Fellow volunteer Nancy Hodge believes it is a parent's responsibility to help the school.

"I think it is really important to support the public school system and to develop extra things for programs. The teachers just don't have the time," she said.

"It is very necessary to enrich the program. If the parents don't do it, nobody will," she said. "I feel that one of the most valuable ways I can help my child is to help his school."

Wine Watch

County wines win national recognition

By JIM JOHNSON

WHEN A respected wine publication recommends to its reading audience that they buy wines from a specific retail chain which just happens to promote their publication, one has to question politics and the quality of the wines recommended.

For this reason I have questioned, with few exceptions, the credibility of the wine press in general. One of the exceptions would be recommendations made by Wine and Spirits Buying Guide, based upon the outcome of the American Wine Competition.

To qualify for the competition a wine would have had to establish its quality by winning a gold medal at one of the several major competitions throughout the United States each year. Having qualified, the wines are submitted to a panel of judges who have excellent credentials.

To view this event in proper perspective, keep in mind that annually there are hundreds if not thousands of wines entered into major competitions. Of these wines, approximately .5 percent will win a gold medal.

What chance would a Monterey County wine have to win or place? When you consider that there are only 50 or 60 premium wines which bear Monterey appellation produced each year, the chances are slim.

In the prestigious chardonnay category, what would be the odds of chardonnays from our county winning both first and second place? Would you take the bet at 100-to-one odds?

If you gambled, you won.

First place was awarded to the Morgan Winery for its 1982 Monterey County Chardonnay and second place honors went to Chateau Julien for its 1982 Private Reserve.

This feat becomes even more remarkable when you consider that both wineries released their first wines last August. Other honors went to Ventana for its 1982 Chenin Blanc, Jekel for its 1981 Late Harvest Johannisberg Riesling and J. Lohr for its Non Vintage 1980 Monterey Cabernet.
